Inside:

Repairs are complete on the Carmel World War I Memorial and it will be rededicated Friday at 11 a.m. The stone arch was felled Aug. 6 when a runaway car plowed into it. The rebuilding teamed the son of its architect and the son of one of the workmen who built it in 1921. Shown here (right) is Brian McEldowney, grandson of one of the original workmen. Plans for the masonry were detailed by T. Gordon Greene, son of the late architect Charles Sumner Greene. Photos and the story about the five-week rebuilding project are on pages eight and nine.

An Italian consul, in Carmel?

Yes, and the story of Giulo de Petra is as fascinating as it is diverse. He keeps an office just off San Carlos and explains how he came to Carmel starting on page six.

Who gets the mansion?

What to do with the city-owned Flanders mansion has vexed city leaders since they bought it in 1972. A town meeting is slated next week to track down, all at one time, the half-dozen or so ideas from the public. The five-bedroom house is being rented to a Carmel real estate broker. He lives in it and wants to stay. Details on page 17.

Peril to new restaurants seen in parking plan

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL SOON MAY see its last new restaurant.

Beset by tourists searching for culinary pleasures, Carmel may nibble on the hand that feeds it, effectively eliminating new restaurants or restaurant expansion by setting minimum parking space requirements.

In a report to the Carmel Planning Commission, Planning Director Bob Griggs has suggested a new ordinance that would require one parking space for each three seats in a new restaurant.

A public hearing on the report has been scheduled at 4 p.m. on Wednesday before the Planning Commission.

"That would just about eliminate the possibility of any new restaurants in Carmel," Griggs said of his own proposal.

The City Council had ordered a study in August of the density of Carmel restaurants which serve alcohol. The motion was made by Councilmen Bernard Anderson and David Hughes. The report was compiled to assist the Council according to that wish.

BESIDES RESTRICTING restaurant growth in Carmel, the proposed ordinance would place the same restrictions on other establishments with fixed seats like theaters and churches.

If the Church of the Wayfarer, Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue, were to open its doors as a new church, for instance, it first would be required to pay the city in-lieu parking fees. They would total $800,000, according to statistics from the Planning Department and the church.

Likewise, the Carmel Village Theater, another establishment with fixed seating, would have to pay a massive $1.6 million before opening.

Because little, if any, on-site parking is available in the city business district, the establishments would have to go off-site or pay in-lieu parking fees for each space.

Early in October, the City Council raised in-lieu parking fees a whopping 72 per cent. Spaces that used to cost $8,000 now cost $13,750 per stall.

If an average-sized Carmel restaurant were to open after adoption of the proposed ordinance, the parking space costs would be staggering.

Charlie O's, the 62-seat restaurant at Dolores Street and Ocean Avenue, for instance, would have to supply 21 parking spaces if it were to have opened under the proposed law. The 21 in-lieu parking spaces would cost $283,500.

Griggs said that amount is roughly equivalent to the value of two 4,000-square-foot-lots in Carmel's commercial district.

The Pine Inn, Ocean Avenue at Monte Verde Street, seats about 200 diners in its combined food service areas, Griggs estimated. If the Pine Inn restaurant were new and applying for a use permit under the proposed ordinance, it would have to pay more than $800,000 in in-lieu parking fees, Griggs added.

BASED ON CURRENT maximum seating capacities, supplied by the city, here are in-lieu parking fees other Carmel restaurants would have to pay if they were to open under the proposed ordinance:

Village Corner, Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue, $297,000; General Store, Fifth Avenue and Junipero Avenue, $378,000; Fabulous Toots Lagoon, Dolores Avenue and Seventh Avenue, $486,000; and the Clam Box, Mission Street and Fifth Avenue, $567,000.

The average parking requirement for new restaurants in California is one parking space for every three seats, according to Griggs. He called Carmel's current requirements the "least restrictive" on the Peninsula. Carmel requires one space for every 1,000 square feet of floor space.

The density finding

More than a third of the 14 Carmel restaurants that serve alcohol are situated no more than the length of a football field from another eatery that sells spirits.

And seven of the other nine are no more than 425 feet from some other dining room that sells cocktails.

Here are the findings:

RESTAURANT	DISTANCE TO NEAREST LIKE ESTABLISHMENT
General Store (Junipero and Fifth)	375 feet
Pump House (Junipero and Sixth)	375 feet
Clam Box (Mission and Fifth)	335 feet
Jack London (San Carlos and Fifth)	300 feet
Hog's Breath (San Carlos and Fifth)	320 feet
Simpson's (San Carlos and Fifth)	425 feet
Piscean (Dolores and Sixth)	350 feet
Butcher Shop (Ocean and Dolores)	300 feet
Pine Inn (Ocean and Monte Verde)	300 feet
Fabulous Toots Lagoon (Dolores and Ocean)	425 feet
Harbinger (Carmel Plaza)	300 feet
Briar House (Mission and Seventh)	300 feet
Bully III (Dolores and Eighth)	575 feet

Bout over tourism, business

City Council rift goes public

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE WEIGHTED PENTAGON that is the Carmel City Council nearly toppled irreversibly onto its 3-to-2 side Monday in heated debate about how to redecorate the wall behind its City Hall dais.

At issue was the size and manner of displaying Carmel's 1929 zoning code preamble. But many saw the move to enlarge one of its passages as a slap at tourists and the estimated 3,000 who work in Carmel but live elsewhere.

One council faction wanted to excerpt the passage that emphasized the city was created for people who live here. The other faction was adamant in saying the sign issue was designed to drive a wedge between businessmen and residents.

In a sometimes uncontrolled council session, the City Council finally compromised on the size and wording of a sign.

The sign will display the entire zoning preamble, not just the part that states Carmel is primarily a residential city.

The proposal that stirred the council and prompted heckling from the audience was a 10-foot-long redwood sign to cover the length of the wall behind the council table. As proposed by Councilmen Mike Brown and Helen Arnold, the sign, complete with gold-carved letters, would have cost more than $500.

A SMALL, TWO-FOOT-WIDE sign showing the preamble already hangs in the Council Chambers. It was posted after an August council meeting when Councilwoman Arnold requested such a sign, and received the unanimous consent of the council. The sign cost about $80.

But Brown and Mrs. Arnold argued Monday that the sign was too small. They requested a sign big enough to be seen from all parts of the chambers, a converted church.

The request sparked a rip-roar of protest.

The debate unwound to the issues that have torn at the council for months. Impassioned councilmen reiterated their views on the business and residential communities of Carmel, while rowdy audience factions jeered or applauded.

What could have become an irreversible split in the already divided City Council was temporarily mended, however, by an unexpected attempt at conciliation by Mayor Gunnar Norberg.

Norberg's move came after a passionate speech from Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson, supporter of the residential lobby, Old Carmel.

The commissioner said it was time to stop taking sides. He appealed for a compromise and an end to "the flaunting of things in the face of the opposite side."

THE TENSE SESSION pitted Councilmen Bernard Anderson and David Hughes against Norberg, Brown and Mrs. Arnold. What began as a heavyweight fight ended in a unanimous decision there could be no winner.

The calm that prevailed by midnight could be interpreted as the first mutual gesture by the council "to clean up the mess we have created," Anderson said. Or, as one observer said, the temporary calm could be little more than an attempt by the council to avoid further public embarrassment.

Prior to voting on the sign, Hughes, rarely one to show anger, denounced what he called the council's "ugly and disdainful" approach to nonresidents.

"Your heavy heel goes right in the eye of the 3,000 people who work in Carmel but don't live here," Hughes declared.

A 3-2 VOTE on the preamble banner seemed close until Anderson shocked the council by loudly saying, "I want this

Tor House fund

Dear Editor:

It has been called to my attention that an effort toward the preservation of Tor House is underway. Robinson Jeffers' "jaggle of masonry" certainly must be preserved and I would appreciate the name and address of the group or individual taking contributions.

Computional error

Dear Editor:

Bruce Horowitz did a very nice article in interviewing me (Pine Cone, Nov. 3) regarding computers with minor exceptions, such as locating Rutgers University in New York instead of New Jersey. For the record, in our age-conscious society, I would much prefer that if Mr. Horowitz is going to change my age, he would subtract two years instead of adding, thereby making my age 52. It illustrates what difficulties computational errors can cause.

More dog trouble

Dear Editor:

In the hope that this will help dog owners who walk their dogs on a leash: Is there a public domain (that strip of land near the road where a sidewalk might be) or do people own up to and into the road here in Carmel?

The abuse I have taken from supposedly ladies and gentlemen since I came here while walking my dog is inconceivable.

I have walked a dog for over 60 years in many states, but their treatment is just unbelievable.

Carmel tone lost

Dear Editor:

I am sorry not to renew my subscription. The reason is that I feel the paper, without the full-page cover photograph of a Carmel scene, lacks the eye appeal and distinction which I associate with Carmel and want to see maintained in every way possible.

Also, the addition of columns which appear in daily papers, such as Balzer (in the Los Angeles Times) might be a trend. Perhaps it is your intention to transform the Pine Cone by adding material found in city newspapers and making it more like them. As I see four or five different papers each week, local and national, I deplore any indication that the Pine Cone is relinquishing its Carmel tone.

Turning up the heat in Carmel's second kitchens

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE HEAT will be in the kitchen when the Carmel Planning Commission begins investigating a new type of zoning proposed Monday by Councilman David Hughes.

Hughes suggested a type of spot zoning that would finally make lawful certain second kitchens in Carmel. He dubbed the designation "R-1½ zoning."

The city currently allows one so-called "food preparation area" on each single-family residential (R-1) lot. The Hughes proposal would legalize second kitchens in Carmel homes that meet safety standards.

Second kitchens in Carmel homes generally indicate second tenants. Hughes said he does not object to homeowners renting to a tenant. He said he objects, however, to nonresident landlords renting duplexes for excessive profit.

IRONICALLY, the proposal was an offshoot from a City Hall study that called for a crackdown on illegal second kitchens. It said increasing numbers of Carmel homes had them.

The report from the City Hall staff said 40 such kitchens were known to exist, but it estimated the number exceeds 300.

City Administrator Jack Collins suggested that the city enforce the law against the known illegal kitchens. He dismissed the idea of a house-by-house "search and destroy" drive, which he said would cause "wholesale discomfort and hostility" among residents.

"And the wholesale removal of any incumbent City Council," quipped Mayor Gunnar Norberg.

Collins called for some type of enforcement of the 1929 ordinance that forbids second kitchens.

NORBERG FOLLOWED with a 10-minute soliloquy on the plight of the small homeowner and striving artist in Carmel.

"We have managed to exterminate and forbid anyone with small means to live inside the city limits of Carmel," declared the mayor.

He noted Carmel became renowned not because of wealthy homeowners, but because "poor artists and writers were able to find a room somewhere." Norberg said the 1929 provision was never intended to be used against the small, single-family dwelling. He said the ordinance was meant to regulate the proliferation of hotels and motels in the city. Motels in the city's residential zone (R-1) have 41 non-conforming but legal second kitchens, according to Collins.

"The city is pursuing the minnows instead of the sharks," Norberg claimed, referring to the motels. He told the City Council it was time to "get off the backs" of those who have an extra room or a guesthouse.

A burst of applause followed the mayor's speech, including praise from those who generally oppose Norberg.

BARNEY LAIOLA, a former Carmel mayor, noted second kitchens do the city a favor by taking the load off motels. He said he favored second kitchens that met safety code requirements.

Art Strasburger, Old Carmel chairman and owner of Carmel Realty, said he would prefer to see such accommodations for permanent residents, not casual visitors.

Following the suggestion from Hughes for the "R-1½ zoning," Collins inquired, "Where would we put it?"

"In Carmel, there is no such thing as living on the wrong side of the tracks," argued Councilman Bernard Anderson. Anderson said he favored spot zoning as opposed to a single designated area in the city where second kitchens would be allowed.

Councilman Mike Brown asked how the council could avoid discrimination in approving some second kitchens, but not others.

"CARMEL IS AN esoterically segregated community," said Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson. He said the community is becoming "less viable" as it ignores a "moral responsibility" to provide low-cost housing.

Norberg agreed. "We should allow the creative genius to flower here in the future as in the past," he said. The mayor called for a hands-off policy on second kitchens.

The council unanimously referred the second kitchen zoning issue to the city administrator and the Planning Commission for study.

Special parking for residents, beer permit appeal face council

HARDLY RECOVERED FROM its marathon slugfest three nights ago, the City Council will lace up the gloves again Monday to consider preferred on-street parking for residents and an appeal that could affect the future of the Village Corner restaurant.

At the direction of City Council, City Attorney George Brehmer will deliver an opinion on the validity of parking regulations in Carmel that would favor residents.

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling earlier this year said communities legally can stop commuters from parking in residential neighborhoods.

Brehmer's written opinion affirms the ruling, but he stressed the regulations must be based on "reasonable" municipal goals. The words "preferential parking," Brehmer added, should not be used verbally or in writing, however.

The city attorney suggested the term "equalization of opportunity parking." What does it all mean? Simply that residents could park for longer time periods than nonresidents.

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN has backed the preferential parking concept. He says it will attract more Carmel residents to do their shopping in the central business district.

Brown's proposal would allow residents twice as much time to park in a space as nonresidents.

The lengthy report from Brehmer lists numerous recommendations and warnings.

ALSO ON TAP is an appeal by owners of the Village Corner Restaurant.

The Village Corner was denied the beer and wine permit by the Board of Adjustments last week. The denial centered on the limited toilet facilities at the restaurant. It has one restroom. The Board of Adjustments said it would require a second restroom prior to permit issuance.

Hot blaze destroys Carmel home

A floor furnace is believed to have started the blaze that destroyed a house in Carmel early Tuesday morning. The single-story home, on Eighth between Santa Fe and Mountain View, was vacant and no one was injured.

Three engine companies rushed to the blaze at 2:55 a.m. The wood frame house was totally involved in fire when the trucks arrived, said Carmel Fire Marshal Vern Allred. Damage from the blaze was estimated at $50,000.

The hot blaze threatened to spread to several nearby buildings and it took firefighters 15 minutes to contain the fire. Allred said flames jumped to a nearby structure, but they were quickly extinguished. The adjoining building suffered an estimated $600 in damage. Trees near the fire also were singed by the heat.

The blaze was the second in 16 days that Carmel fire investigators linked to a floor furnace malfunction. Allred said he still was piecing together the exact cause of the fire late Tuesday, but he confirmed that the flames started around the floor furnace.

The other fire also caused an estimated $50,000 in damage. It occurred on Oct. 22. Investigators said a dropcloth had been tossed over the floor furnace and it ignited in the night when temperatures dropped and the furnace was activated. The house was painted inside the day before the fire.

Allred said the house on Eighth Street also had been painted earlier. He said the last person known to have been in the house was a painter.

A Los Angeles couple identified as William and Virginia McKencie bought the house in September, according to Allred.

He said the fire appeared to have smoldered for four to five hours before flames finally shot through the roof. A total of 25 firemen fought the blaze. Allred said their work was hampered because flames weakened the redwood floor and several firefighters fell when the boards buckled under their weight.

Business leader, Bailey, stricken by heart attack

Robert W. Bailey Jr., president of the Carmel Business Association, was listed in fair condition Wednesday at Community Hospital after suffering a heart attack at his home late Monday evening.

Bailey, of Pebble Beach, had just returned home from a Carmel City Council meeting. Bailey was outspoken at the meeting, criticizing the City Council for not listening to the business community.

An ambulance was called to his home at 11:45 p.m. Monday. He arrived at Community Hospital at 12:20 a.m. and was admitted to the intensive care unit at 1 a.m.

Bailey was listed in serious condition through most of Tuesday, but his condition had stabilized by Wednesday, according to a hospital spokesman.

Bailey and his wife, Josephine, own the Mole Hole gift shop at the McFarland Court, on San Carlos near Sixth Avenue.

He was appointed president of the business association in August when Dale Leidig resigned.

Carmel meeting Monday

A transfer of coastal power

AN EXCHANGE of coastal planning authority in the Carmel area formally begins Monday. The trade between the State Coastal Commission and the Monterey County Planning Commission may happen as early as December; however, it conceivably could take more than two years.

Faced with a 1980 state deadline, both Monterey County and the city of Carmel must file detailed coastal plans that meet the spirit of Prop. 20, the 1972 ballot initiative that later became the California Coastal Act of 1976. They also must be certified by the coastal commission. All 15 counties and 53 cities with shoreline have the same deadline.

The state initiative was aimed at slowing the spread of shoreline development and preserving public access to beaches. Both the city of Carmel and the county come under the Jan. 1, 1980, deadline on local programs, however, Carmel has filed for exemption from the coastal act. Meanwhile, it has hired a consultant for $2,000 to prepare a local plan.

ON MONDAY, aides to the county planning commission will explain the 26 issues they perceive to be crucial in a local plan. The meeting opens at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater at Carmel High School.

The Monterey County coastline has been divided into four segments for purposes of compiling the local plan. The Carmel area stretches from Carmel Beach southward to the mouth of Malpaso Creek.

Other areas defined in the study are Del Monte Forest, from Carmel Beach northward to Point Pinos; Big Sur, from Malpaso Creek south to the San Luis Obispo County border; and the North County segment, from the north edge of Marina to the Santa Cruz County border. For Del Monte Forest residents, the informational meeting is scheduled tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Robert Louis Stevenson School.

On Wednesday, the county planning commission has scheduled a public hearing in Salinas about the issues and to recommend revisions, if any, based on comments from the public meetings. A public hearing before the board of supervisors also is scheduled. It has been put on the Dec. 6 agenda. County officials said they hope a countywide plan can be submitted following the hearing before the supervisors.

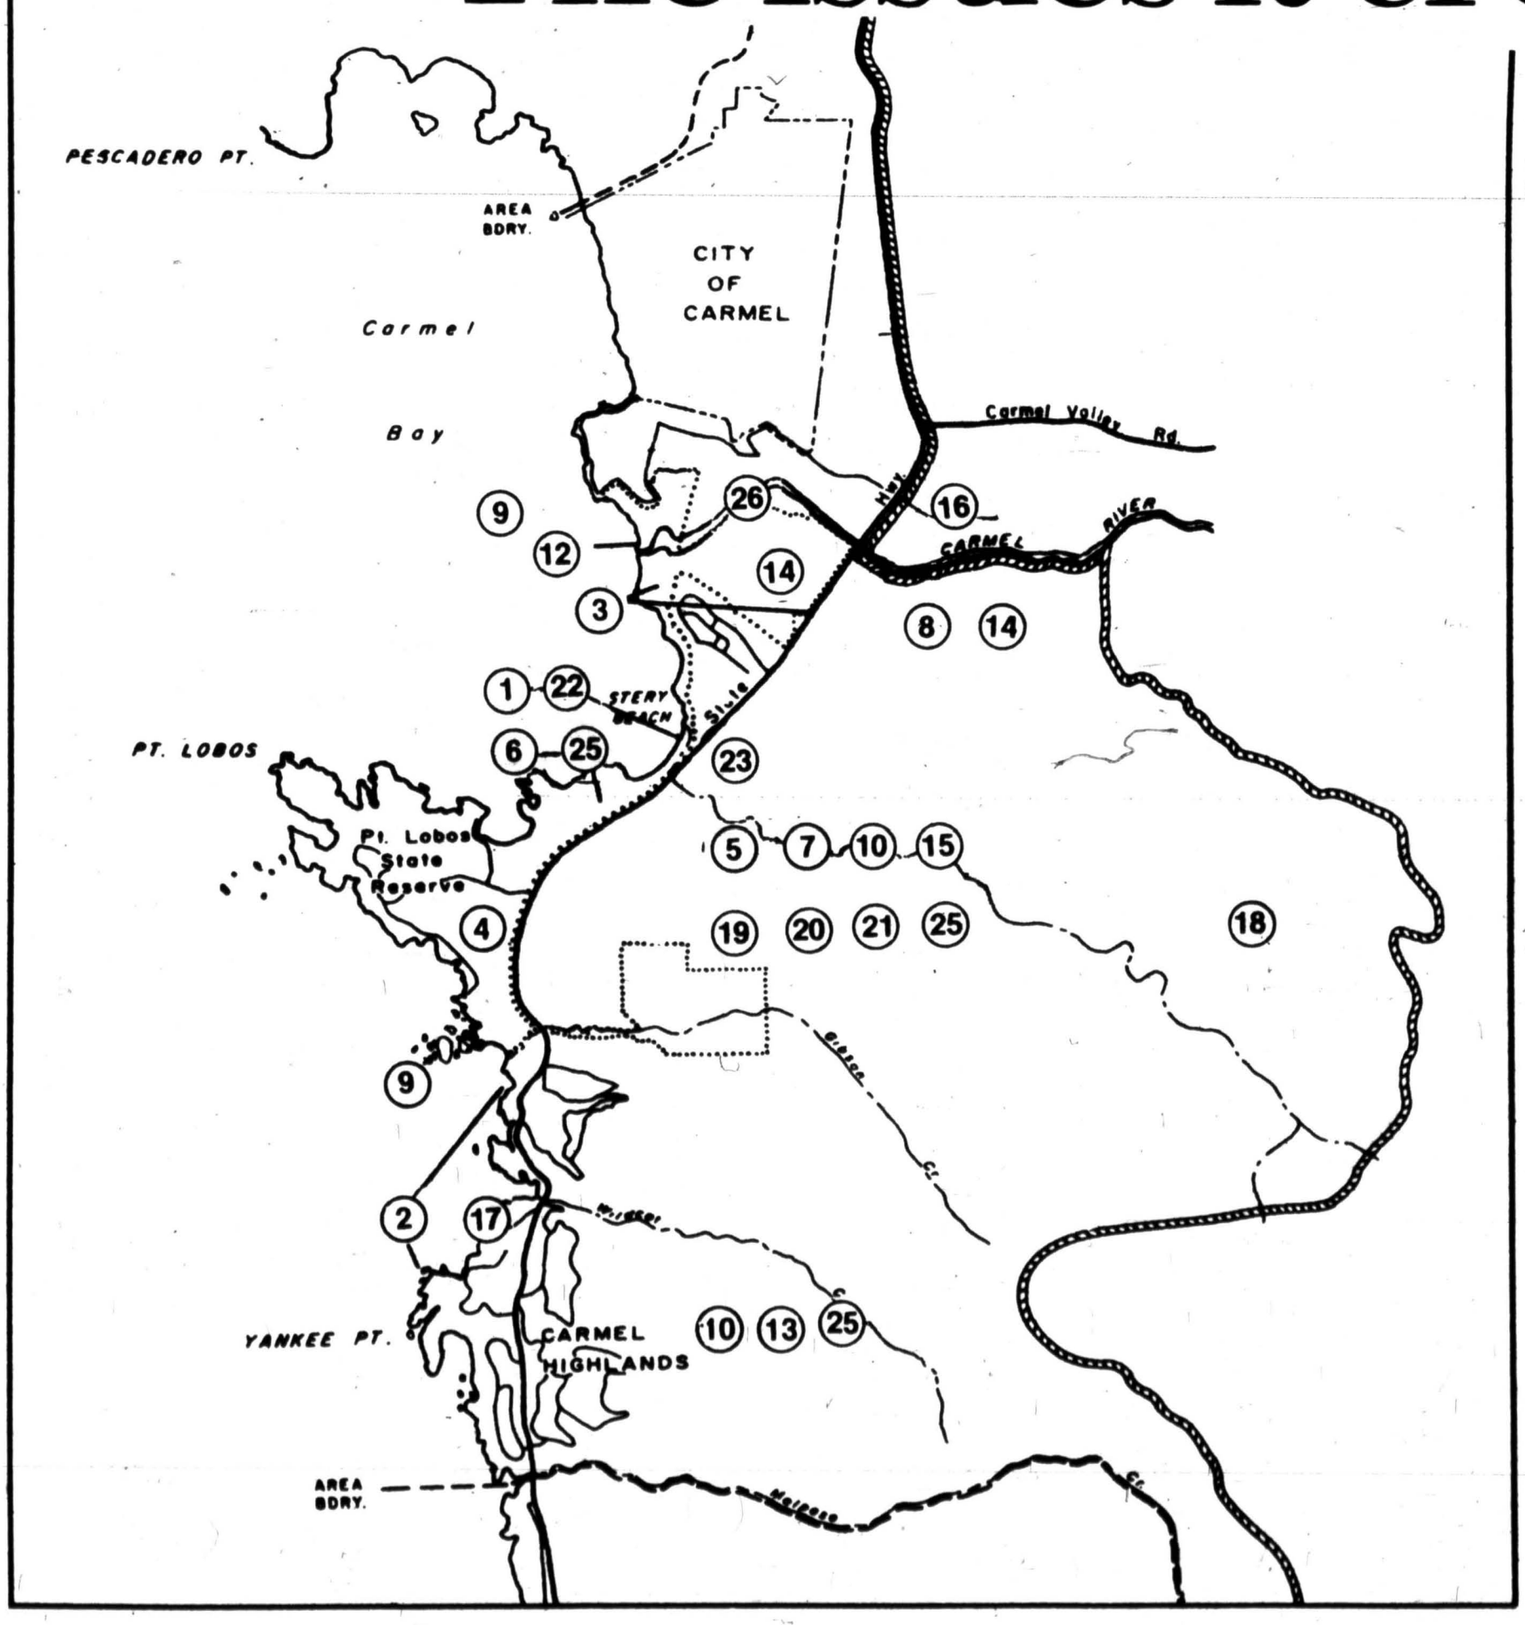
The issues it creates



Planners say Carmel must resolve 26 of them

Shoreline

1) A lack of adequate parking at Monastery Beach endangers pedestrians and motorists, creates a visual nuisance, limits effective access to the beach and gradually is blighting the area. When planning future access facilities, the special needs of scuba divers should be considered.
2) Current opportunities for public access to state lands across private beaches should be reviewed to determine if access is adequate.
3) Opportunities for coastal trails and bikeways should be investigated.

Visitors

4) Long range development plans for State Parks and Recreation Department property between Carmel River and Carmel Highlands -- including agricultural lands west of Highway 1, parking areas at Monastery Beach, future staging areas and visitor facilities for Point Lobos Reserve and management of Gowen Cypress\Reserve -- must be coordinated with Coastal Act policies.
5) Potential conflict exists between present private planning for the area and Coastal Act policies encouraging lower cost visitor and recreation facilities.
6) As part of recreational planning for the area, and as an interface to the Big Sur planning efforts, the potential for a visitor information center relating to Highway 1 and recreational areas to the south needs to be considered.

Parking proposal

His report to the Planning Commission cites glaring differences. In other communities, a 1,000-square-foot commercial space must supply 22 parking spaces.

What would happen if the establishment changed hands and became a retail store, for instance?

"The process cannot work backwards," Griggs said, explaining there could be no refund of in-lieu parking fees.

BESIDES AFFECTING new restaurants, the ordinance also would affect restaurant expansion, Griggs explained. The 3-to-1 ratio between seats and parking spots would apply to the expanded facility. Even if the in-lieu fee requirements were modified to one space for every 10 seats, "it would still have the same effect," Griggs added.

In requesting the report, the council was seeking a way to regulate liquor-serving restaurants based on density, their proximity to one another.

Griggs opposed control by density in his report. "Distances selected would be arbitrary and would deprive one property owner within a district a right given to another," he concluded.

He claimed regulation based on parking requirements is the most practical method. "If we are going to try to stop restaurant growth in Carmel, we must do it legitimately," he said.

Council rift

vote to go on record."

While Brown attempted to set specifics about the size of the letters, catcalls rang out from the audience.

"Why the hell don't you table it? Knock it off!" shouted Barney Laiolo, a former mayor of Carmel.

Carmel Business Association President Robert Bailey, who earlier stood before the council to warn of an increasing rift between the business and residential community, jumped from his seat and assailed Brown. "All we get from Brown is the size of letters. He hasn't heard a thing we've said," Bailey stormed.

THE COUNCIL was warned about implications of the new sign by City Administrator Jack Collins. Collins insisted the action would be "an insult to people who do business in this community."

He said he agreed with the sentiments of the preamble, but warned sloganizing "destroys meaning."

An angry Mrs. Arnold said that council should "take it out of the code" if it did not take the preamble seriously.

"The rights of nonresidents are equally important to the rights of residents," countered Hughes. "It frightens me that we have reached a state where we say all are equal except residents are more equal."

Commissioner Davidson warned the preamble sign was causing more strife than it was worth.

"I cannot approve of it (the sign)," Davidson said, suggesting a smaller sign.

Norberg said the preamble is at the base of what Carmel "is, was or will be." He said he did not want to see the "tail wag the residential dog."

"If the business community is willing to fit within the context of the preamble, they are welcome. If not, then let them go somewhere else," Norberg said.

WHILE BROWN CONTINUED to argue for a larger sign, Hughes complained that Norberg, Brown and Mrs. Arnold were trying to "sledgehammer" the new sign through.

"Why not just brand all residents with an 'R' on their foreheads," Hughes said bitterly.

The heated debate finally moderated and a motion by Anderson, seconded by Mrs. Arnold, called for a preamble sign "complete and visible" in the chambers. Exact size and placement of the sign have been left to the city administrator.

"The preamble says what it says in any event," said Norberg.

The motion passed unanimously. There are no cost estimates available yet from the city, but the funding will be discussed at a "mini-budget session" of the City Council scheduled Nov. 21.

The City Council's second November meeting is scheduled Monday at 8 p.m. in City Hall.

south of Carmel River to the Carmel Highlands needs to be evaluated in light of state policies encouraging provision of low and moderate income housing opportunities.

8) Current planning for agricultural lands at the south of the valley may result in loss of existing low cost farm worker housing east of Highway 1.

Sewage

9) Continued sewage disposal in Carmel Bay and south of Pt. Lobos Reserve, areas of "special biological significance," conflicts with water quality policies.

10) Continued use of individual septic tank systems for future development in Carmel Highlands may pose issues of surface and groundwater contamination.

Habitat

11) Proposed development adjacent to Pt. Lobos Reserve on the east side of Highway 1 and on adjoining private undeveloped properties could result in intensified human activity in the area, and a corresponding decline in habitat values, both at Pt. Lobos Reserve and at Gowen Cypress Reserve.

12) Future plans must consider preservation of existing wetland, lagoon and riparian habitats as well as localized habitats for native plants.

13) Refer to 10.

Agriculture

14) The preservation of cultivated floodplain agricultural lands on private and state property must be considered in light of current or future development proposals.

15) Future development proposals in the upland areas south of Carmel River and east of Highway 1 may conflict with coastal act policies for protection of valuable grazing, watershed and open space uses.

Hazard areas

16) New development, including residential and sewage treatment facilities, proposed for lands adjacent to the Carmel River, needs to be planned in consideration of potential flooding such as has occurred in the past.

17) The adequacy of current county ordinances and standards controlling land form alteration and bluff top development need to be re-evaluated in light of coastal act policies and guidelines.

Forest

18) Maintenance of the net native forest cover and vegetation in the eastern portion of the area must be considered in future plans.

New development

19) There is the potential that proposed development east of Highway 1, across from Pt. Lobos Reserve, will overload this offsite recreation area and will add substantially to existing problems of overcrowding.

20) Existing county plans for the area indicate greatly intensified use of private lands east of Highway 1. This may contribute to dependency on State Parks and Recreation lands west of Highway 1 and add to the spread of urbanization throughout the area.

Scenery

21) Preservation of the outstanding visual features of the area, ridgelines, forests, cliffs, beaches and seascapes must be a foremost consideration in light of public and private development plans and general plans now being prepared for the area.

22) Refer to one.

Future questions

23) Proposed and future private development in the area, to the extent that it is dependent on Highway 1, may conflict with the need to preserve the remaining limited capacity of the highway for tourist and coastal recreational use.

24) Refer to six.

25) Existing and proposed water supplies for future development in the area need to be evaluated carefully to ensure yields are not exceeded and adequate water remains to meet the needs of the natural environment.

26) Current plans to expand wastewater treatment facilities serving the Carmel area need to be reviewed to insure coordination of service area and capacity with future planned development.

Italy's man in Carmel

By AL EISNER

"AN ITALIAN CONSUL in Carmel? Aw, c'mon . . . you've gotta be kidding!"

That's the way people react when they are told that the Italian government does, in fact, have a representative in this tiny village of 4,000 souls.

Giulio de Petra, the dapper 67-year-old consular agent of the Italian government can be found in his office on San Carlos just north of Sixth every afternoon from 2 to 5 p.m. His blood-red Alfa Romeo, with its "CONSUL" license plates, can usually be found nearby, ready to swoop him to his Carmel Highlands home.

Why does Carmel need its own Italian consul? Actually, the village is only a small part of the area that is served by de Petra — an area that includes all of Monterey Peninsula, Salinas and much of the North County. De Petra estimates that one of every 10 persons in this part of the county is of Italian extraction.

And, it is by sheer accident that his office is located in Carmel. Here's how it all came about: When the highly-esteemed Monterey attorney Peter Ferrante died two years ago, de Petra was named to take over the consular agent responsibilities performed by Ferrante. Monterey Savings and Loan Association wanted to give him desk space in its downtown Monterey office, but couldn't spare any. They offered him the cottage just behind its Carmel branch on San Carlos.

WHAT DOES A "Consular Agent of Italy" do, and who is the man selected to perform these duties? After discovering de Petra's fascinating background, it's easier to see why he is so uniquely qualified to conduct his bureau. De Petra is a former lawyer, soldier, teacher and world-class athlete gifted with Continental charm and wit.

Giulio was born in 1910 in Lama dei Beligni, a city in the region of Abruzzi, east of Rome. His father, a civil engineer, was able to raise his family in an upper middle-class milieu that included higher education for the children. Giulio recalls that he was named for his uncle, a professor of archaeology at the University of Naples who was in charge of the excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Waiting on lines for bread is all Giulio is able to remember about World War I.

He graduated from law school and was admitted to the bar in 1935 — when the world was still in the grip of economic depression. Unable to open his own practice, he went to work in the legal department of the Sindicato — the federation of labor unions. (Under Mussolini's rule, Italy was separated into cooperatives for industry, commerce and agriculture.) De Petra was head of a provincial union from 1935 until the end of World War II.

WHILE HE WENT to school and pursued his career, Giulio also competed in "heel-and-toe" walking races. At one time in his athletic career, he held the world record for the 30-kilometer walk. He started competing at age 15. Two years later, he was selected for the international competition in London.

ENTHUSIASTIC ITALIANS follow de Petra and other marathon walkers through the streets of Naples in 1934. Automobiles were not as common in those days, so he was usually followed by hordes of motorcyclists and bicyclists. Now, de Petra says ruefully, when walkers compete in the streets of Naples, it causes major traffic tieups.

He recalls it was his fondest dream to compete in the Olympics, but fate was to frustrate him every four years. The long-distance walk was dropped from the 1928 Olympics in Amsterdam, Giulio says, because of controversy over the rules. The event was reestablished for the 1932 Olympics Games in Los Angeles, but he was unable to compete because he was pursuing his law studies. He was fit and ready to compete in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, but instead was drafted into the army and sent to Ethiopia. The war intervened in 1940 and 1944, and by then, his opportunity for Olympic glory faded.

Giulio still walks, whenever he can, to keep fit. He says it's much healthier than jogging, which places undue strain on the heart. Walking can be hazardous along Highway 1 in the Highlands, and it is a lonely activity without company, Giulio complains.

Walking is still an Olympic sport. Competitors use a jerky motion caused by stretching their legs and swivelling their bodies to obtain maximum leverage. Walkers can reach speeds of 8 to 9 miles per hour, Giulio says, depending on the distance of the race.

Giulio competed all over Europe and North America, finishing second in the Canadian event in 1934. He held several records that stood for many years, and was Italian champion in the 30 km. event.

GIULIO'S MEMORIES of World War II are much more vivid than his recollections, as a child, of the first World War.

As a provincial union lawyer, he was selected to go to Germany to look after the welfare of 200,000 Italian laborers in the Ruhr. Giulio recalls ruefully that the massive Allied bombings of Duesseldorf, Cologne and other Ruhr cities "was worse than being in the front lines. It was pure chance that I survived. Cologne was completely destroyed." He says that "people died by the thousands when they were buried under the debris" after seeking safety in basements of large buildings. After the awful PATRIOTIC SPEECHES and ceremonies will mark the rededication Friday of the Carmel World War I Memorial, felled Aug. 6 by a runaway car. Repairs on the stone arch were completed Friday after five weeks of work.

The ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. at the foot of the monument, Ocean and San Carlos. The Carmel High School band and the color guard from the Naval Postgraduate School will open the program.

Built in 1921, the monument was first dedicated on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, in honor of the 54 Carmel men who served during World War I. In symbolic tribute to the armistice, Brigadier General (Ret.) G. D. Wahl of Carmel is scheduled to ring the monument bell 11 times at Friday's ceremonies. The bell-ringing custom is derived from the fact peace was declared on the 11th day of the 11th month at 11 a.m., according to Carmel City Administrator Jack Collins.

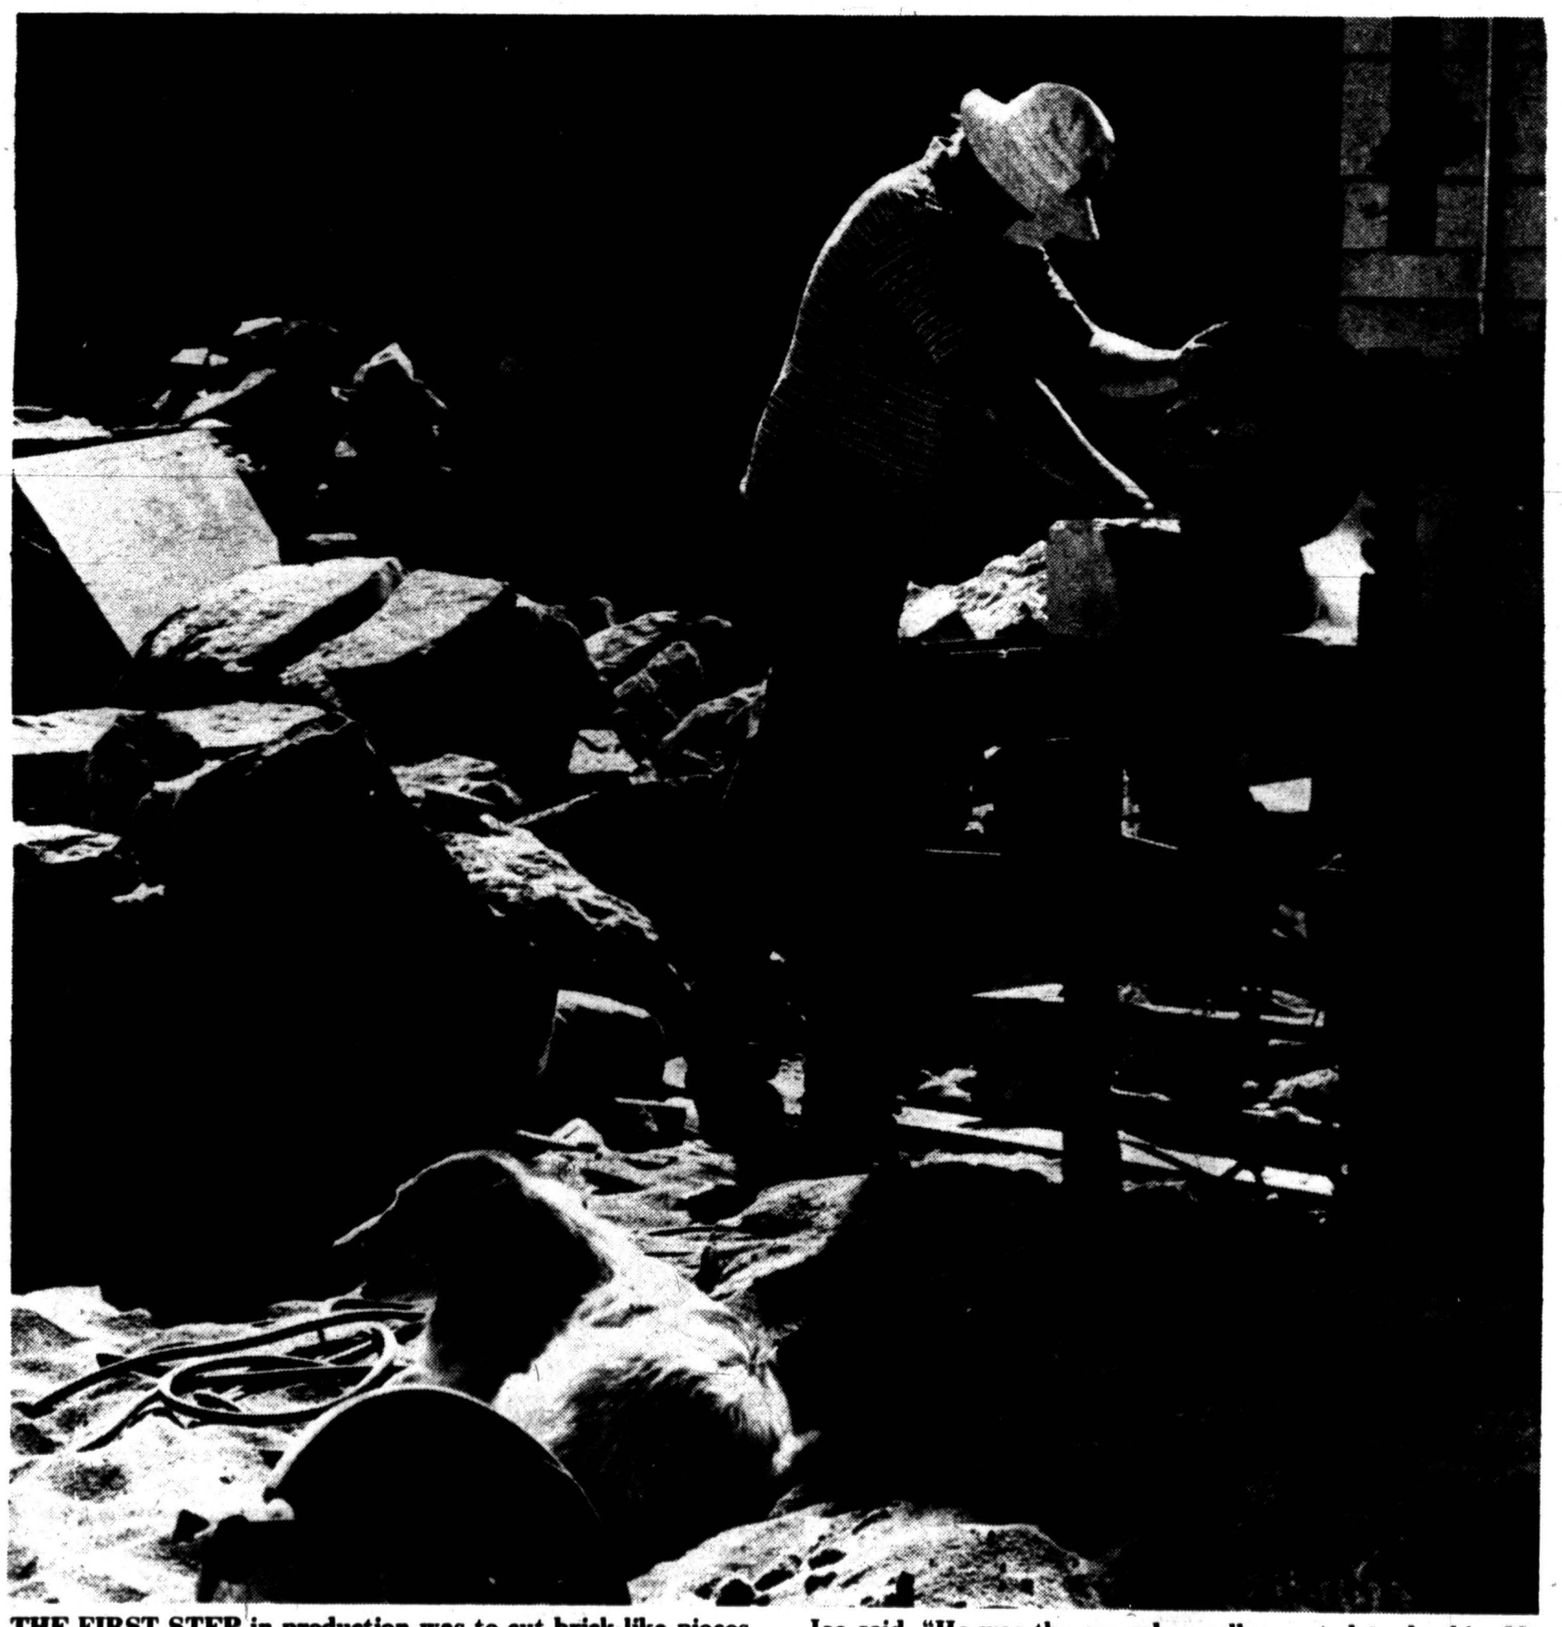
REPAIR WORK on the 56-year-old monument brought together the sons of two men who helped erect the original memorial. T. Gordon Greene of Carmel, son of Charles Sumner Greene, the architect who designed the monument, prepared detailed blueprints of the stone placement for masonry workers. The workers were directed by Joe McEldowney, also from Carmel, whose father was among the workmen who built the memorial in 1921. McEldowney's crew cut the needed Carmel sandstone to the precise shapes specified by Greene's son. The cutting work was completed



THE FIRST STEP in production was to cut brick-like pieces from large hunks of Carmel sandstone. The stone was taken from a quarry behind the Fish Ranch, near the mouth of Carmel Valley. At work here is Brian McEldowney. His father Joe said, "He was the one who really wanted to do this. My father worked on the original, but I wasn't all that enthused. Brian wanted to do it, though, because his grandfather had worked on it and all." (George T. C. Smith photo) at the McEldowney stone works in Sand City.

The elder Greene designed several houses in the Carmel area before his death in 1957. He moved to Carmel in 1916. In 1920, he built a house for himself at 13th and Lincoln. The D. L. James house in the Carmel Highlands is regarded as Greene's most creative work. It was built in 1918.

IN DISMANTLING the damaged monument, workers found a "time capsule" that contained relics of the 1921 dedication. Two copies of the Pine Cone, a list of the war veterans and a city proclamation had been stuffed into an emptied ginger tin. Copies of this week's Pine Cone will be sealed in a second capsule and cemented into the monument, according to Collins.

For the ceremonies, Ocean Avenue will be cordoned off between Dolores and Mission. The hosts for the rededication, Carmel American Legion Post 512, have announced the schedule of ceremonies. It is:

Introduction of guests and program, Walter E. Snyder; presentation of the colors, Naval Postgraduate School Color Guard; national anthem, the Carmel High School band; invocation, Rev. Howard E. Bull; tolling the memorial bell, Brigadier General (Ret.) Wahl; City Council resolution, read by Mayor Gunnar Norberg; memorial rededication, City Administrator Collins; an address by Rep. Leon E. Panetta (D-Monterey) has been tentatively scheduled; benediction, Rev. Bull; taps and closing remarks.

The wine connoisseur

Sipping in South Africa

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

WASHINGTON—Along the banks of the Potomac the trees had turned from green to yellow-gold, intermingled with splashes of crimson. Under blue skies, the season had changed. Forty-six appointed judges of wine, from as far away as South Africa, England, France and California, assembled every morning for the six-day International Wine and Cheese Festival in the D.C. Armory to evaluate 800 American wines. The festivities also presented noted wine and food celebrities in seminars and cooking demonstrations in a nonstop program — deserving of more attendance than, alas, it drew. It was the glorious weather, we were told, that outdrew the festival staged Oct. 19-24 by the Maitres des Tastevins. Even the splendid Matisse exhibition at the National Gallery was a second draw to Jack Frost's outdoor spectacular.

Beyond our daily sniffing, spitting and cogitating on the relative merits of everything from champagne to port wines, against the possibility of bestowing gold, silver, bronze and honorable mention awards, there was the chance to dine out in the city's noted restaurants. By happy chance, our companion on successive evenings (at the Cantina D'Italia, Le Provencal, Lion d'Or and Rive Gauche) was California vintner Robert Mondavi, the talented, indefatigable champion of our indigenous heritage.

Many years ago, it was my privilege on numerous occasions to dine out in leading restaurants with the late Louis M. Martini. Always, before the evening was over, our table, and the tables of the lucky people seated nearby, would be covered with a glamorous clutter of wine glasses and bottles as we tasted one Martini wine after another against comparable wines drawn from the restaurant's wine list. And always, the Martini wines emerged with stunning supremacy!

In Washington, D.C., the wine lists may not be noted for California wine listings, but they are worth searching for. At the Rive Gauche, with Robert Mondavi and his daughter, Marcia, we decided to try some comparisons, with some quite revealing rewards.

With appetizers of prosciutto and melon, and Loup au Fenouille as our fare, white wines were in preferred order. Against the Robert Mondavi 1976 Napa Valley Fume Blanc, modestly listed at $9.75, the winemaker ordered a 1974 Batard Montrachet from the Domaine Leflaive, priced at $28.

"With our 1976 Fume Blanc," he explained, "by a longer fermentation on the skins, plus some richness of press wine, all then drawn off into French oak barrels, even with some yeasts, we feel we can obtain a richer wine, of more substance than the Loire Valley kind of Sauvignon Blanc wine, more like a white Burgundy."

The comparison was a shocking one from the outset; the French wine appeared an amber gold, hinting at a possible premature oxidation, which the nose confirmed. The younger, lemon-gold Mondavi wine was fresh to the nose, silky and as full-bodied as the winemaker had predicted. It was an obvious bargain, a delight with the foods at hand.

Hoping to find a body-relationship with a French white Burgundy to clinch his point, Mondavi ordered another from the same French estate-bottler, a Puligny-Montrachet from the Clovoillon vineyard, also of 1974, at $20. It proved cleaner, gentler, but rather innocuous. In the time lapse, we again sampled the Batard-Montrachet. With the added breathing time and warming, its unattractive nose dropped away, and one could detect through its positive oaky taste a growing richness. But the economics for the diner, should he care, were obvious.

At Le Provencal, we made a similar comparison with similar results: A fine, but green-sapling taste of a more costly Pouilly-Fume and Meursault-Perriere versus the Mondavi Fume Blanc, again at a fraction of the cost.

It was an answer to how one may dine out better for less, when the wine list offers good selections of California wines. Our own indulgence in comparative tastings, of course, may be put down to the winery expense account. The net profit is in the lesson learned, no matter how chauvinistic the results may seem.

Lahner one-man show to open at Laky Gallery

An exhibit of new paintings by Emile Lahner will open Sunday, Nov. 13, at the Laky Gallery, San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel, in honor of the artist's 84th birthday. Lahner has been called "one of the last great painters of the School of Paris."

Although he was born in 1893 in a region of Central Europe that belonged to Hungary, Lahner's artistic ties have been almost exclusively to Paris. Orphaned young, his guardian insisted he pursue a marketable career and Lahner took his degree in mining engineering.

But he had set his heart on becoming a painter and shortly after graduating, he enrolled in the School of Fine Arts in Budapest. Some years later, feeling cramped and needing to broaden his horizons, he set off on a "Grand Tour" which brought him to Paris in 1924.

During this exciting period of Parisian art and literary history, Lahner studied, drew and sketched. He remained equally remote from the Surrealists, the Expressionists and the Cubists, preferring to pursue a path of his own. "I am intent on mastering light and color in my own way," he said after a painting trip to the south of France. "I am trying to interpret landscape in terms of a symphony of colors and movements."

In 1927, when Lahner was living in Montparnasse, surrounded by painters, writers, professors and other members of the intellectual elite, he exhibited in his native Hungary and was awarded the famous Ernst Prize.

As a painter of the School of Paris, it is a curious fact that Emile Lahner's work received American acceptance and praise before gaining French recognition. The Americans were the first to admire and exhibit his paintings; in 1928 the director of the Philadelphia Museum of Art came to Paris to personally select Lahner's works for his exhibit in Boston.

Finally, in 1930, he was invited to exhibit in Paris and had two one-man shows at the Galerie de la Salle and at the Salon des Independents, and was included in the first exhibition devoted to the School of Paris in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

During the lean years of World War II, Lahner and the School of Paris painters were scattered; four years passed before they could come together again. Lahner worked at landscape painting in the French countryside, drawing, sketching, printing and watercoloring due to the scarcity of oil pigments.

Lahner painted each day, read the great art critics and art historians and remained shy of publicity. In 1950, he had an exhibit of his landscapes and in 1952 and 1953 he made two painting trips to North Africa. Two years later, he was asked to design a chapel near Algiers. He not only designed the building, but also the stained glass windows.

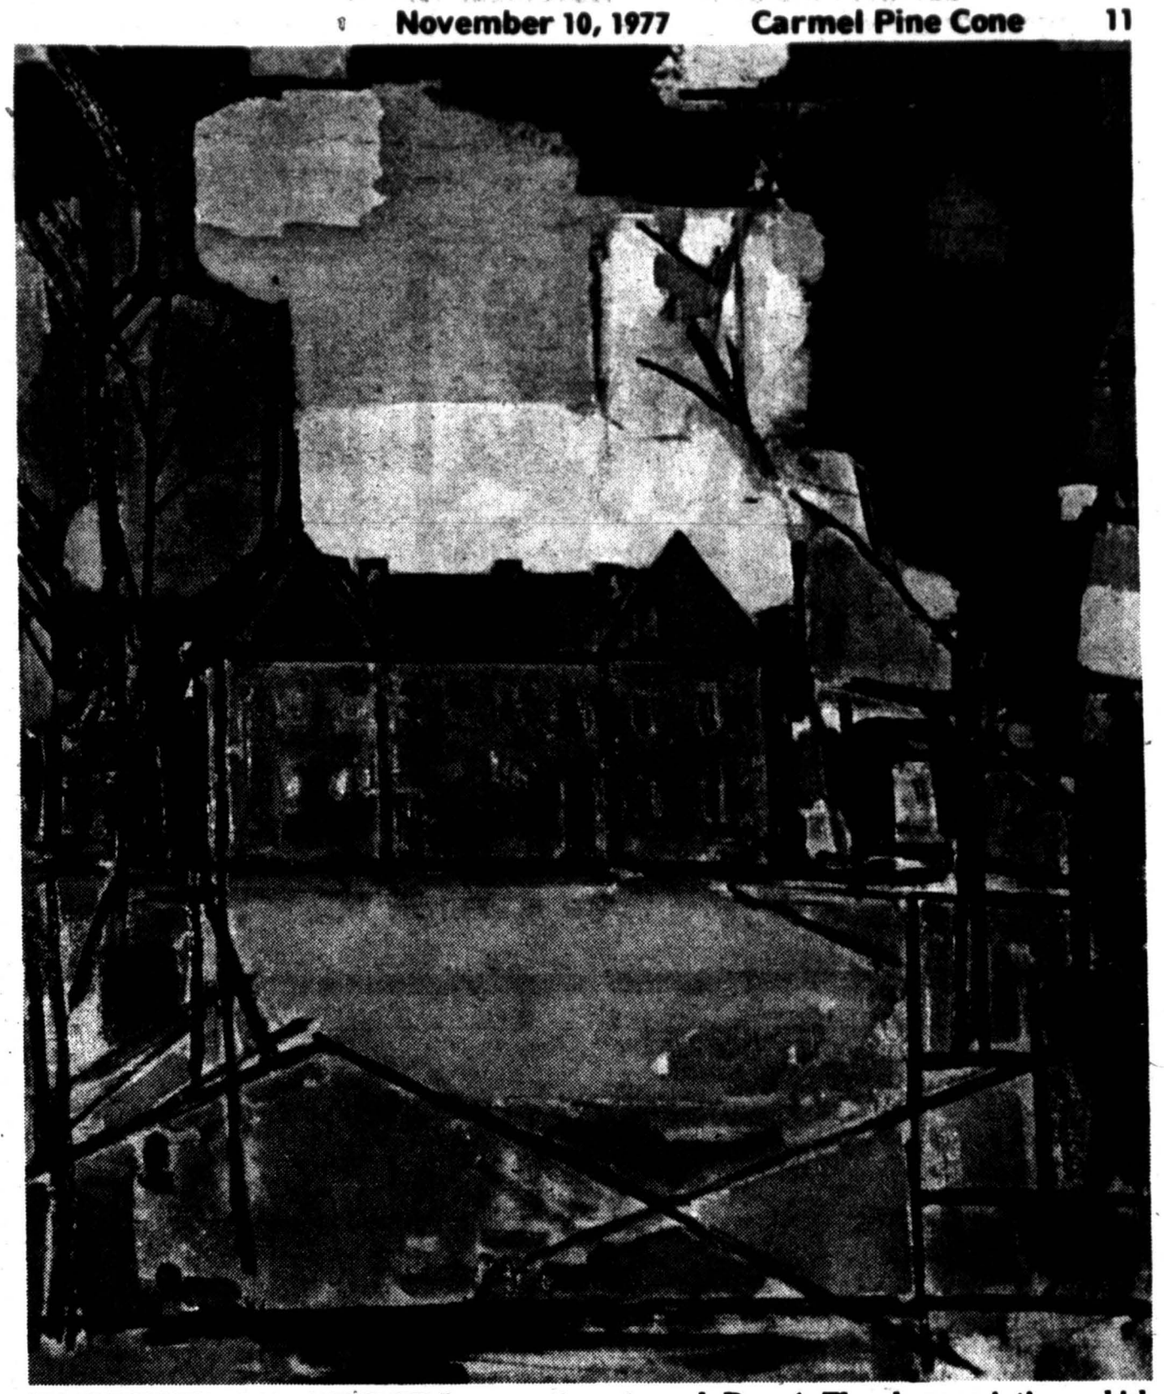
"All my works are really only parts of one vaster work, a generalization, as it were, of that dialogue which I pursue with nature, with Form, Line and Color as my tools," he has said. Art historians, however, are tempted to distinguish periods in Lahner's work, as they do with Picasso's.

Thus, Lahner had a rose period, followed by a Cezannesque period, a post-Cubist period and an abstract period. The interesting thing about Lahner, however, is that the periods overlap. Because of these constantly shifting phases, it is nearly impossible to date his paintings.

This year, Lahner had a retrospective exhibit at the Galerie Rene Drouet, Faubourg St. Honore, Paris; a one-man exhibit of oils and drawings at the Municipality of Fontenay le Comte; received gold medals from the Republic of Senegal and the Republic of the Ivory Coast; and participated in the Festival International de Peinture et d'Art Graphique-plastique de Saint Germain-des-Pres.

In the early 1960s Lahner met a fellow Hungarian who owned an art gallery in Carmel. Since that meeting, Les Laky, owner of the Laky Gallery, has collected the work of this artist and periodically presents it to the public.

The exhibit will remain on view through Dec. 4. Gallery hours are 11 a.m.- 5 p.m. For more information, phone 624-8174.



"L'AUTOMNE EN VENDEE," an oil painting by Emile Lahner, is one of the works by the contemporary French master on view at the Laky Gallery in Carmel through Dec. 4. The above painting, which measures 81 cm. by 65 cm., was completed in 1960.

Santa Cruz-Monterey rivalry aimed at higher music standards

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IN OUR SMALLER cities, the local symphony orchestra is, or ought to be, the principal musical event of the concert season. It is the biggest artistic money spender in town. The monies are returned locally, for the most part. Its success is primarily a reflection of local effort. Its challenge: Shall we direct local resources to this lofty artistic goal? On the Monterey Peninsula for 40 years the answer has been "yes." But quality also is a criterion in the growth and development of an orchestra, and by what standards shall such things be measured?

It is unrealistic to compare our local orchestra to the likes of, say, the Chicago Symphony, or even the one in San Francisco. For our players, the orchestra activity is, at best, part time. Typical metropolitan orchestra musicians play 50 weeks a year. The aspirations and achievements of our local orchestra must represent the amalgamation of local resources. We must look to our orchestra's music director for the artistic guidance that realizes the highest level of excellence of which we are capable. But, again, by what standards shall we be measured?

LAST SUNDAY produced an experience that may supply the answer. The opening concert of the 20th season of the Santa Cruz County Symphony was played at Watsonville's First United Methodist Church. This was the finest playing ever by the Santa Cruz Orchestra. The Santa Cruz County Orchestra, long the orchestral joke among Monterey County Symphony players, has come of age. Santa Cruz deadwood has been replaced by youth. Most of the orchestra's players are young. Many of them are among the strong talent in the Monterey County Symphony itself.

In its 20th season, the Santa Cruz Orchestra is playing four subscription concerts, two performances each, and one chamber orchestra program. This represents a cutback from last season's six subscription concerts and it is the result of financial woes. In his seventh season, Maestro George Barati has scheduled interesting programs including music by Wagner, Stravinsky, Haydn, Piston, Saint-Saens, Elgar, Bach, Sessions, Albeniz, Delius, Verdi and Honegger. The opening concert on Sunday included the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto, Ravel's Pavane and a symphony by Franz Berwald. Much of the music on these programs is relatively peripheral to the mainstream of concert repertoire, which I, for one, find quite stimulating. This opening program was played to full audiences in both halls.

Comparatively, the Monterey County Symphony has a much stronger wind section. We also enjoy a stronger brass section and the disparity is quite obvious. The big improvement in the Santa Cruz, however, is in the strings. Concertmaster James Shallenberger, the Monterey principal second violinist, has exerted a remarkable influence on the Santa Cruz strings. They play with a new ensemble and sound, and seem much more aware of each other and their conductor. Maestro Barati, not generally the most inspiring conductor, does provide clear, strong leadership. With his direction and the strong new string section, the Santa Cruz Symphony is now displaying unprecedented ensemble, rhythmic tautness and exciting performances.

OVERALL, THE MONTEREY orchestra is better. We have more strength in all four sections, most conspicuously in the winds and brass. But the basis for friendly competition for higher artistic standards is also more clearly established than ever before. The other artistic differences are Santa Cruz soloists are usually less well known than those engaged by Monterey (and of course are less expensive), and the Santa Cruz repertoire is much wider. On the podium Barati is more rational, Taeuber more expressive, relatively.

With our stronger resources, the upcoming Monterey concert should be a showcase event. The performances of Nov. 20, 21 and 22 will feature one of this country's strongest violin talents, Jacob Krachmalnick, in the splendid Brahms Violin Concerto in D. Krachmalnick has played the international circuit to acclaim, while in the United States he has become best known as a leading orchestral concertmaster. He played here many years ago under John Gosling, and has made a few recent appearances with the Crown Chamber Players at UC Santa Cruz. The press attention he has received is an overdose of raves.

The other large part of the coming program is Ravel's spectacular orchestration of Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. Moussorgsky left this tribute to his artist friend, Victor Hartmann, in a piano score only. Fortunately, it was Ravel with his great sensitivity and taste who wrought this work for orchestra. Not only is the score filled with rich color, but it complements the players with many attractive solo passages. This should be a most satisfying concert.

Champagne for anniversary

The Carmel Art Association, a non-profit artists' cooperative formed in 1927 by a group of 19 Carmel artists, will celebrate its 50th anniversary, Saturday, Nov. 12, with a champagne supper for current members of the association.

Carmel was already an established artists' colony when the association was formed, but the artists had few places to display their paintings for sale. Although the original purpose was to immediately obtain an exhibition gallery centrally located for the convenience of the artists and public, it was 1934 before the association moved into its present home on Dolores near Sixth.

The original building was what is today the Beardsley Room. The central gallery, with its lovely pegged-wood floor, was designed and built in 1934 by architect-member Clay Ott. The large gallery on the right was added in 1938.

Today, there are 136 active and associate members of the association and the gallery has new exhibits every month.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. For additional information, phone 624-6176.

Donald (Red) Layton will play the general; Steven Wilhite will be Igor Romanoff; and Mary Kaelberer will play Juliet. Other cast members are Ed and Mary Mahon, Jill Kelly, Fred and Leslie Zeile, Frank Manci, Ralph Miller, Carol Benefiel, Norine Prochaska and Ray Kuipers. Tantamount hosts concert by duo

A concert with Baroque lutenist Tim Mills and classic guitarist Byron Paul Tomingas will be presented Thursday, Nov. 10, 8:30 p.m. at the Tantamount Theater, Middle Canyon Rd. off Rancho Rd., Carmel Valley.

Mills will play Suite in A m, "L'infidele," by Silviis Leopold Weiss, and Tomingas will play selections by Couperin, Bach, Duarte and Tansman.

Mills studied Renaissance lute with Donna Curry in Los Angeles and Robert Stizich in Basel, Switzerland. His instrument was built by Robert Lundburg of Portland, Ore. An accurate re-creation of an 18th-century Baroque lute by Hoffman, the instrument has 13 courses (pairs and single strings) for a total of 24. The large dimensions and unique tuning provide a distinct character.

THESE TWO PHOTOS, taken 10 years apart, show Giulio de Petra when he first won the 25 kilometer heel-and-toe Italian championship in 1927, and again when he successfully defended his championship in Florence just before the outbreak of World War II. The emblem of the House of Savoy can be seen in the earlier photo. Ten years later, it was adorned further with the emblem of Facist Italy.

years of 1942 and 1943 in the Ruhr, he was sent to Berlin and later to Vienna. Both cities were subjected to merciless pounding by Allied planes during the later stages of the war. Giulio managed to survive.

He also remembers being sent to Sardinia as commander of an infantry company earlier in the war. "All we fought was the mosquitoes," Giulio says. "Half of my company had malaria." He was drafted and sent home several times before getting his assignment in Germany.

He fled Vienna just 36 hours before the Soviet tanks rumbled in. The Communists took over the unions immediately after the war in Italy. Giulio returned to private law practice.

His brother, who had settled in Los Angeles, arranged for Giulio to emigrate as a student in 1948, so he came to Pasadena. He was unable to practice law because of the extensive extra study required to qualify for the California Bar, so he began to teach Italian in Los Angeles. Giulio jumped at the chance to teach at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey because "I knew how beautiful Carmel was." He taught Italian and German at the DLI from 1951, and served as chairman of the Italian Department until his retirement in February 1976.

Giulio is critical of the modern study methods coming into use at the language school. "They are attempting to teach by technology," he says, referring to the computer aids available at the school. He says it was one of the main reasons he quit teaching at the school. "Language is alive," Giulio declared. "I do not believe in self-study. Language must be taught by a live person to a live group of students." He is critical of mechanical devices even as supplementary aids to teaching.

Giulio says he taught Italian to military attaches in six months. This required intensive study of six hours per day. Class size was limited to 10 students, all of whom spoke only Italian from the very first day. Students were also required to study for an additional three hours every night.

After the intensive language course, the new attaches were sent to intelligence school. Does this mean that he was teaching language to spies? "Oh, yes," said Giulio matter-of-factly.

WITH THIS KIND of background, it was not unexpected that Giulio de

Dining out:

Alpine Inn is a Carmel charmer

ADVERTISEMENT
Reprinted from The Review

IF YOU'VE come to Carmel expecting to discover quaint, charming little restaurants serving unusual, European cuisine, we have good news. The Alpine Inn, tucked away at the end of the Paseo San Carlos on San Carlos St. between Ocean and Seventh Aves., fits the description perfectly.

It's tiny, with a total seating capacity of barely 20; it's quaintly decorated with traditional Swiss print curtains and cushions; and it serves Swiss/German/European food prepared by a talented young European chef.

Because the Alpine Inn is so small, and because it serves unusual dishes, the dinner menu is limited to three entrees each evening, served as complete dinners for a fixed price. Dinners include cheese fondue, salad, fresh vegetables, bread and butter in addition to the main course. The only other items on the menu are appetizers, beverages and three intriguing desserts. Incidentally, each week's menu repeats through the month, so you can plan a return visit in advance.

A good cheese fondue is served immediately after the menu is presented so you can snack and read simultaneously, and we guarantee you will finish the fondue down to the very last drop.

As might be expected, the Alpine Inn serves a good number of veal entrees, fresh fish, seafood and poultry. The well-rounded menu also offers beef and lamb, frequently prepared en brochette.

We dined on a Thursday, when the menu offered Kassler Rippchen und Sauerkraut, Fresh Snapper in Herb Sauce and Jagerschnitzel. Random samplings from the October menu include Duck Robespierre stuffed with sauteed apples, Swiss style Paprika Schnitzel, Lamb Chops in Mint Gravy, Filet of Sole Meuniere and Scallops in Lobster Sauce.

LORE PARSONS, who presides over the Alpine Inn and who is a native of Germany, deserves special praise for her wonderful Swiss-style dinner salad which is served in an oversized glass goblet. It contains green and black olives, fresh mushrooms, cucumber, tomatoes, red onion rings, artichoke hearts, hard-cooked egg, parsley and dill, all lightly tossed in a mild, flavorful dressing.

Translations of the Thursday entrees gave us smoked roast pork with sauerkraut, fresh Monterey Bay red snapper and a "hunter's schnitzel" of veal with some very interesting vegetables.

Each dish is presented in a copper pan, barely moments from stovetop or oven, and the food is fresh and hot.

Our serving of smoked pork slices was generous and the ruddy-red pork was tender and tasty. Homemade sauerkraut — a far cry from the canned variety — was accompanied by whipped potatoes.

A dining companion ordered the snapper, which was served with home-fried potatoes, fresh carrots, and green beans. Garnishes of parsley, pimiento, lemon slices and black olives made the plate especially attractive. An unusual suace, seasoned with thyme, basil, oregano and bay leaf, turned the simple fish into a most interesting dish.

We also sampled the Jagerschnitzel, made of a tender boneless veal cutlet topped with oranges, stuffed green and black olives and the traditional "jager" accompaniments of lots of fresh mushrooms and tomatoes; the dish is the German counterpart of the French Veal Chasseur.

Dessert fans will find the Schwarzwalder Kirschtorte, many thin layers high, the Apfelstrudel and the Kaiserschmarren eminently satisfying, as is the rich, spiced coffee.

The Alpine Inn also serves delightful lunches, both indoors and on the patio. It is open daily except Wednesday and reservations are strongly advised. JAE

Sunset Views:

Carmel a national leader in the arts

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

A CALL FROM Washington, D.C., once again called to my attention how well known and highly regarded Carmel is for its dedication to the arts. Paul Dowling of the folk, nature and heritage program of the America the Beautiful Fund called to understand more fully the unique position that Carmel has taken regarding its involvement in the cultural aspects of the community. Neglected areas continue to be of major concern to the America the Beautiful Fund. Rural sites, underpopulated counties, old towns and resorts, marginal lands, bypassed cities, depleted neighborhoods and towns with populations under 10,000 are target areas for civic and cultural projects.

The organization seeks innovative community endeavors in the arts and asked if we could offer guidelines to other communities trying to present cultural programing. We have had cultural, civic and arts commissions from many communities visit the center to learn of its successful operation. Quite recently, a letter arrived from the Saskatchewan Center of the Arts asking for information regarding a "policy manual for the arts" as well as our scheduling of entertainment and other cultural activities. We are constantly receiving letters or calls from arts associations throughout California asking about our operation and any help that we can offer for a successful program.

Recently, there was an article in the newspaper stating that local expenditures for the arts have been growing at a pace much faster than realized by any government agencies. Big cities, which spent as much as $145 million of their own scarce money on the arts last year, may be getting considerably more help from the federal government soon. While the National Endowment for the Arts has been working with state agencies, the rapid proliferation of local arts programing has created a need for more direct involvement. In some cases, the municipal burden far exceeds the state's. The need for financial relief is probably greatest in the financially beleaguered cultural centers of the East. But the intensive municipal investment in the arts seems to be happening all over the nation. By the 1980s, America's second largest employer may be the recreation and arts industry. Already 35,000 college students are studying to be "recreation directors," "recreation therapists," "arts administrators" and the latest, "leisure counselors."

Carmel is considered a leader and an innovator. Carmel's latest acknowledgement in the arts field has been its Festival of the Firsts Playwriting Competition. Many private organizations encourage and offer prizes for playwriting, but Carmel is the first city to directly offer such an incentive. Eighty-two plays were received by the city for this competition. Interest throughout the country again has brought to the attention of the many arts organizations and government agencies the earnest dedication with which Carmel approaches cultural enrichment in its community.

Italian consul

Petra would be selected to serve as the successor to Ferrante as the Italian Consular Agent for the Monterey Peninsula area.

Just what does a consular agent do? Most of Giulio's work involves unraveling red tape for persons who own property or who conduct business in Italy.

"Consulates abroad can do everything a Public Notary can do in Italy," Giulio explains. This commonly involves negotiations and transfers of deeds, titles, mortgages, all of which must be done through a consulate.

Giulio helps Italians with their pensions abroad. A good deal of his time is also taken up with helping Italians here who wish to buy or sell property abroad.

The changing political climate in Italy has made it necessary for Giulio to keep up with changes in Italian law, especially in the area of family rights.

"Until just recently," Giulio says, "women didn't have any rights in Italy. They could not own or inherit property. They could not buy or sell property, but were limited to deriving income or use of the property they inherited. All that is changing now," Giulio says.

The divorce laws are also softening in Italy, Giulio says. "Illegitimate children formerly had no rights," he says. Because divorce was strictly forbidden, millions of men left their wives and started families with other women. Their children were deprived of all rights to property.

"Did you know that the United States imports more wine from Italy than any other country?" Giulio asks. He is presently working on an all-Italian dinner for the Monterey Peninsula unit of the International Wine and Food Society.

Giulio performs all these services as a volunteer. The government reimbursed him for $400 worth of expenses last year.

Why does he do it? "You can not work all your life and then all of a sudden do nothing," he explains.

COMFORTABLY perched in his Walden Drive home, designed by architect Will Shaw, Giulio says he "used to have ocean views but the trees have grown" in front of the house. His second wife, Yvette, teaches French at the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies and also does translating and interpreting. She is the author of several French textbooks used commonly in American schools.

He has two children from his first marriage. His son is an attorney practicing in Orinda in the East Bay. His daughter, married to an airline pilot, lives in Carmel. Giulio has five grandchildren.

AFTER SUCH an eventful life, shouldn't he begin to think about a rocking chair and playing with his grandchildren? Maybe. He's taken up gardening and tennis, and has two brand new projects of which he's very proud. Giulio teaches Italian to the young opera singers studying and performing with the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble.

He is also teaching Italian to third, fourth and fifth graders at Larkin School in Monterey. A surprising 38 children turned up for the first meeting of the after-school class a couple of weeks ago. If it is successful, he hopes the Monterey Unified School District will include Italian as an elective for elementary school students. It now offers French, Spanish and German.

Why is it so important for kids to learn to speak Italian? "Because of ethnic identity," says Giulio. He says he knows of many cases in which Italian grandparents who could not speak English went back to the old country because they were frustrated at not being able to speak to their grandchildren.

Giulio de Petra has many other new projects in mind. With his boundless energy and Continental charm, his adopted homeland will undoubtedly benefit.

Whose mansion?

Town meeting will underscore crossed intents on public use of city-owned Flanders mansion

THE FUTURE of the Flanders mansion, Carmel's home without a home, will be discussed at a town meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Organized by the Carmel Citizens Committee, the meeting is scheduled in the parish hall of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Ninth and Lincoln.

City Administrator Jack Collins will begin the discussion with a summary of the history of the Flanders mansion.

The purpose of the meeting is not to determine the ultimate use for the publicly owned mansion. The purpose is to have all proposed uses discussed, according to the meeting sponsors.

THE CITY purchased the 14.9-acre Flanders property for $275,000 in September 1972. Real estate broker Bradford Dow rented the mansion for $400 a month in August 1975. His lease expires next summer.

The mansion has five bedrooms, five and a half baths, a small servant's wing, living room, dining room, den, kitchen, butler's pantry, laundry facilities and basement, according to Dow.

The issue of a proper use for the mansion flared in July, when Carmel resident Lyn Bronson asked the City Council for permission to locate a music conservatory there.

What are people saying about possible uses? Here are some comments:

Bradford Dow, presently renting estate, president of Sunset Realty:

"The house was built as a residence and it should remain a residence. There should be as little traffic as possible. I wouldn't want a municipal use there if I were living in the area. The house is dark and drafty and would not be very good as a senior citizens' residence."

Lyn Bronson, seeks to locate school in mansion, initiator of the Carmel Conservatory of Music:

"A music conservatory will preserve the mansion without change. It would also preserve a park-like setting. The cultural aspects would benefit the entire community. The Carmel Conservatory of Music will provide a comprehensive program for cultivation of musical talent through instrumental and vocal instruction."

Mayor Gunnar Norberg, urges mansion become Carmel's City Hall:

"I'm in favor of not having to run to the courthouse in Salinas all the time. If we could incorporate the unincorporated Hatton Road area up to Highway 1, I'd favor a City Hall there at the Flanders mansion. If a City Hall is unacceptable, I'd like to see a city museum."

David Hughes, councilman, undecided:

"I have no firm feeling. It should be a municipal use and not a residence. It should also be low traffic. I haven't heard the right use yet."

Dr. Donald Davidson, planning commissioner, prefers a residential care facility:

"The community needs to do something that shows concern for what constitutes nearly 25 per cent of its population (senior citizens). This facility would require no change in zoning and would be the quietest use of the mansion. The Junior League could rent the house (except for municipal meetings). They serve Carmel and are not commercialized."

Dorothea Roberts, chairman, city planning commission, favors using the mansion for special functions:

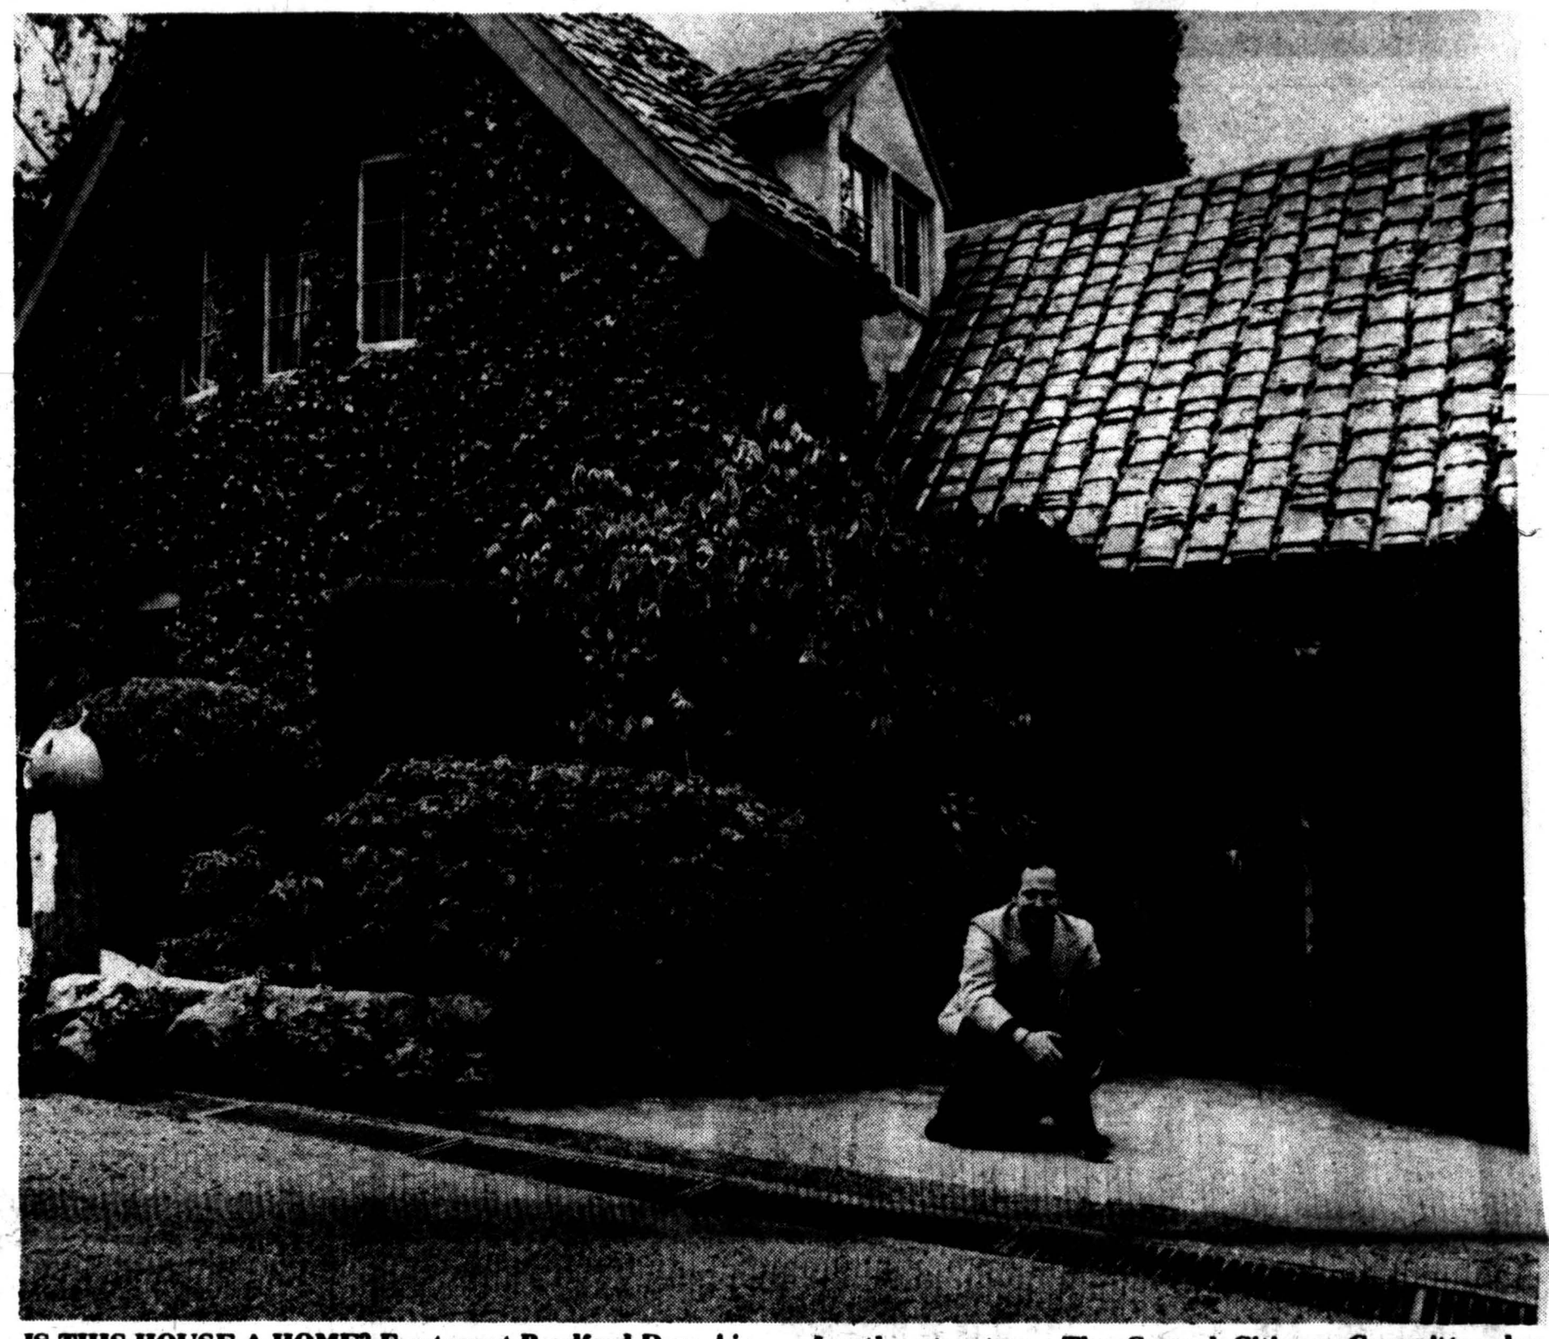
"The city should sponsor events at the mansion. They could entertain special guests or have special functions. It could also house a city art collection. The city is not in the real estate business. If we cannot determine the right use and cannot afford the mansion, we should sell it."

Richard Tyler, Sunset Center director, suggests an arts-related use:

"The Friends of Photography is a local organization and an important factor in the field of photography. They need to expand (now located in Sunset Center). In considering a municipal use, the city must decide how the greatest number of people can be involved."

Bob Griggs, city planning director, suggests it be used by clubs:

"The mansion could lend itself to club use, but any use will require some type of residential occupancy. The mansion is subject to vandalism and requires 24-hour protection. If the city cannot find a proper municipal use, it should tear the mansion down. Otherwise the cost would be a detriment to the community."



IS THIS HOUSE A HOME? For tenant Bradford Dow, his family and his dog, Stormy, the Flanders mansion has been home since August 1975. Before his lease expires in August, the city must determine a proper "municipal use" for the structure. The Carmel Citizens Committee has organized a town meeting Wednesday to help determine the best use for the mansion. (Del Kaller photo)

Pets say the darndest things

By E. G. BALAN

IS YOUR POOCH trying to tell you something? Does your cat seem on the verge of asking for dinner? Perhaps your parrot wants to discuss the articles lining the floor of his cage.

In any case, there is a woman who talks to animals and she visited Carmel on Sunday. It is not astonishing to talk to beasts, but what is astonishing is that she claims to get answers.

"What seems to be the problem with your legs?" Beatrice Lydecker once asked a limping horse. Veterinarians could find no cause for its lameness. "It was my shoulder," she says the horse replied, "but now I find that if I limp I get taken to the barn, fed special grain and don't have to work. What a life!"

Miss Lydecker informed the owners, who, with a technique she showed them, got the horse back to work. Imagination? Read on.

Miss Lydecker conducted a seminar at the Thunderbird Bookstore in Carmel Sunday to teach her audience how to communicate with animals.

On the condition that her techniques not be revealed, she allowed a reporter to listen.

Miss Lydecker is the author of What the Animals Tell Me and has appeared on television talk shows for her unusual perceptions into the furry, four-footed world of beasts. She claims to be in demand in veterinary circles to diagnose difficult cases, and has an upcoming assignment at Sea World to teach the dolphin and whale handlers how to better communicate with their charges.

"BUBBLES," the Marineland whale, already has benefited, Miss Lydecker claimed, because she told his trainer how to communicate with him, and now Bubbles has acquired a liking for human company.

Seminar-goers brought their dogs to the midday meeting. They each took turns

Farr seeks five volunteers for county commissions

County Supervisor Sam Farr has announced he is seeking applicants to fill vacancies on a number of county commissions.

There are two vacancies on the Alcoholism Advisory Board, and one vacancy each on the Status of Women Commission, the Community Services Commission and the Overall Economic Development Program Commission.

Persons applying for the position on the Overall Economic Development Program Commission must be involved with industry, he said. The remaining commissions do not meet more than once a month, and some meet only a few times a year, Farr said.

Anyone living in the fifth supervisorial district, which includes Carmel and most of Carmel Valley, interested in serving on one of these commissions is invited to write a letter expressing interest and to enclose a brief resume. The letters should be written to Farr at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey 93940. They should be received by Friday, Nov. 18.

Plant Society to hear about fire's damage

The first fall-winter meeting of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society will be on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in room 2 at Carmel High School.

James Griffin, the chapter president and research cooperator with the Los Padres National Forest, will give a slide lecture on vegetation damage in the Marble-Cone fire.

Emphasis will be given to forest and woodland communities in the Chews Ridge, Pine Ridge and Junipero Serra Peak portions of the burn.

A short portion of the meeting will deal with plans for electing new officers and future programs.

Women's Caucus meets tonight

The National Women's Political Caucus of Monterey County will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the community room of Northern California Savings and Loan Association, Dolores and Seventh, in Carmel.

The election of officers for the coming year will be followed by a discussion of goals for 1978. The caucus promotes and encourages the participation of women in local politics.

The talkative animals

asking the animals questions and listening for answers. It's done through a mental adjustment of awareness and there were some hits and some misses — some misses by Miss Lydecker, too. But some of the animals' answers were precise and startling in accuracy.

Persons who had never seen the dogs or their owners before heard the dogs talk about home, habits, likes, dislikes, even their favorite brand of dog food.

MISS LYDECKER also remembered past talks with canine conversationalists.

On spaying and neutering she quoted one dog as saying: "Ninety-nine per cent of dogs do not want to reproduce. They don't want the responsibility. They tell me they're glad to be fixed. These animals don't want puppies or kittens, but they can't control their physical drives. And, they don't know that's where puppies and kittens come from."

On maturity: "Basic principles of child psychology apply to animals. They're like children. They'll try to pull stuff on you. No dog matures mentally and psychologically until about age two. Irish setters don't come down off their cloud until three or four and then they just slow down to a run."

Some of you animal lovers are nodding your heads in knowing agreement.

All I know is when it came my turn to ask a little Yorkie a question, and I said "What's your favorite food, doggie?" I distinctly heard (with Miss Lydecker's help) one bright word: "Friskies."

I quizzed the owner and she said "Barnaby" did like Friskies cat food better than anything else.

In any case, Miss Lydecker plans to return to Carmel in December to check on her pupils' progress.

PARTY PLANS

With Thanksgiving around the corner, we want to share some fine holiday recipes with Carmelites. We usually dine out in one of Carmel's restaurants but then we miss the pungent aromas wafting in from our old-fashioned kitchen. Also there is nothing like cold turkey sandwiches in front of a fire glowing in a Carmel fieldstone fireplace.

Roast Turkey with Double Dressing

This tender turkey boasts two delectable dressings, so it is a double standard to maintain. A Virginia gentleman once said his cook always wiped the inside and outside of his fresh turkey with absorbent towels and then put white "store-bought" bread quarters soaked in water into the cavities. This allows the inside to steam. Then pop it into 350-degree oven. Later remove the bread, but do not reuse. Add:

Rice Dressing

Wash ½ cup brown or wild rice in hot water and drain. If using converted rice, crumbled sage is essential. There is a wild rice blend on grocery shelves nowadays, much less expensive. In a heavy skillet put ¼ cup salad oil. Stir in raw rice, ½ cup chopped onions. When lightly browned, add a cup of canned consomme with ¼ cup dry sherry and ½ cup canned mushroom pieces. Salt, white pepper. Cover pan tightly, simmering until rice is fluffy and tender. Cool in bowl covering top with foil and refrigerate until needed.

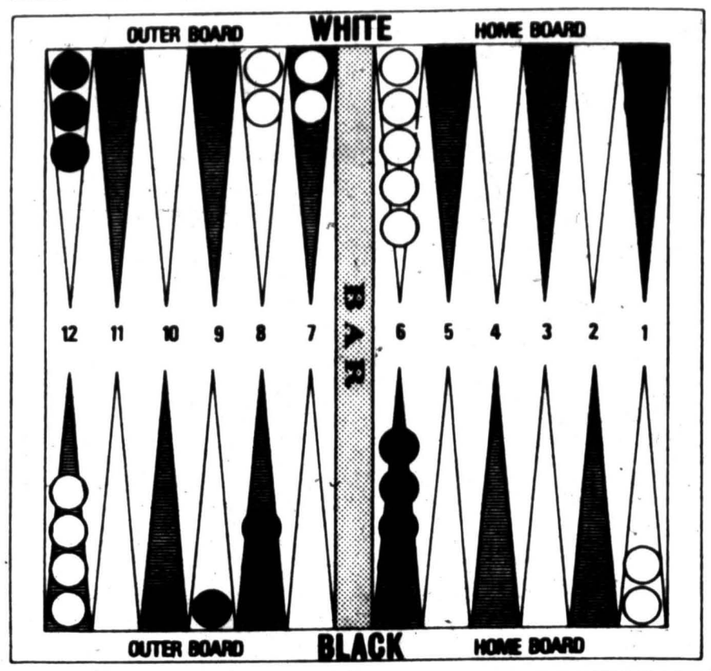
To cook the turkey, stuff the body cavity, after it has been rinsed in cold water and wiped dry, with rice dressing. In the neck, put cornbread stuffing. Avoid packing solidly. Truss turkey placing on V-shaped rack in roasting pan breast down. Cover with a double cheese-cloth dipped in butter large enough to drape down sides of turkey. Do not cover or add water. Roast in preheated oven at 325 degrees. Allow about 25 minutes a pound up to 12 pounds. When three-fourths done, place bird breast up. If covering cloth dries out during roasting, moisten with pan drippings. Let it rest before carving, but do have something for the children while they wait. Their best manners sometimes become tiresome.

For gravy, the day before Thanksgiving you should simmer giblets, minus liver, in salted water to cover. Add a bit of chopped celery with leaves, onions and a pinch of crumbled sage. Remove giblets, chopping them fine. Dilute broth using milk thickened with flour and half-and-half. Stir it constantly over a low heat. Add chopped giblets and A-1 sauce for a rich color. Serve it piping hot from your best gravy boat.

We suggest buying frozen peas and onions for your vegetable and a pumpkin pie from a bakery in Carmel.

If the budget permits, dress well-washed Boston lettuce in a light oil and vinegar mixture in which salt and sugar have been added to taste. Serve it well chilled. Croutons give a sophisticated slant. Toss easily.

Backgammon by Omar Sharif



Black rolls 3-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

This is a close decision, and I am sure there are any number of players who would disagree with me.

The obvious move is to make the bar-point. That is one of the most important points in the game, and I would hesitate to suggest to anyone who chose that move that there is a better one available.

Before you brand me a lunatic, consider the move I suggest: Make the 10-point by playing the 3 from White's 12-point, and use the 2 to split your runners, bringing one of them to the White 3-point.

Set up a board and take a look at the two positions that result. Making the bar-point really leaves you with only two builders for a point inside your home board. Bringing a man down to your 10-point leaves you with many combinations to make one of your important points.

You have accomplished something else with the move I suggested. White is starting to blockade your runners, and by splitting you leave yourself in a position where you can run a man from his home board with any 6.

True, the move I suggest leaves a blot on your 9-point, but you shouldn't concern yourself unduly about that. If White elects to come out and hit you, he exposes himself to return shots at a time when you will have no difficulty in bringing your man off the bar and back into play.

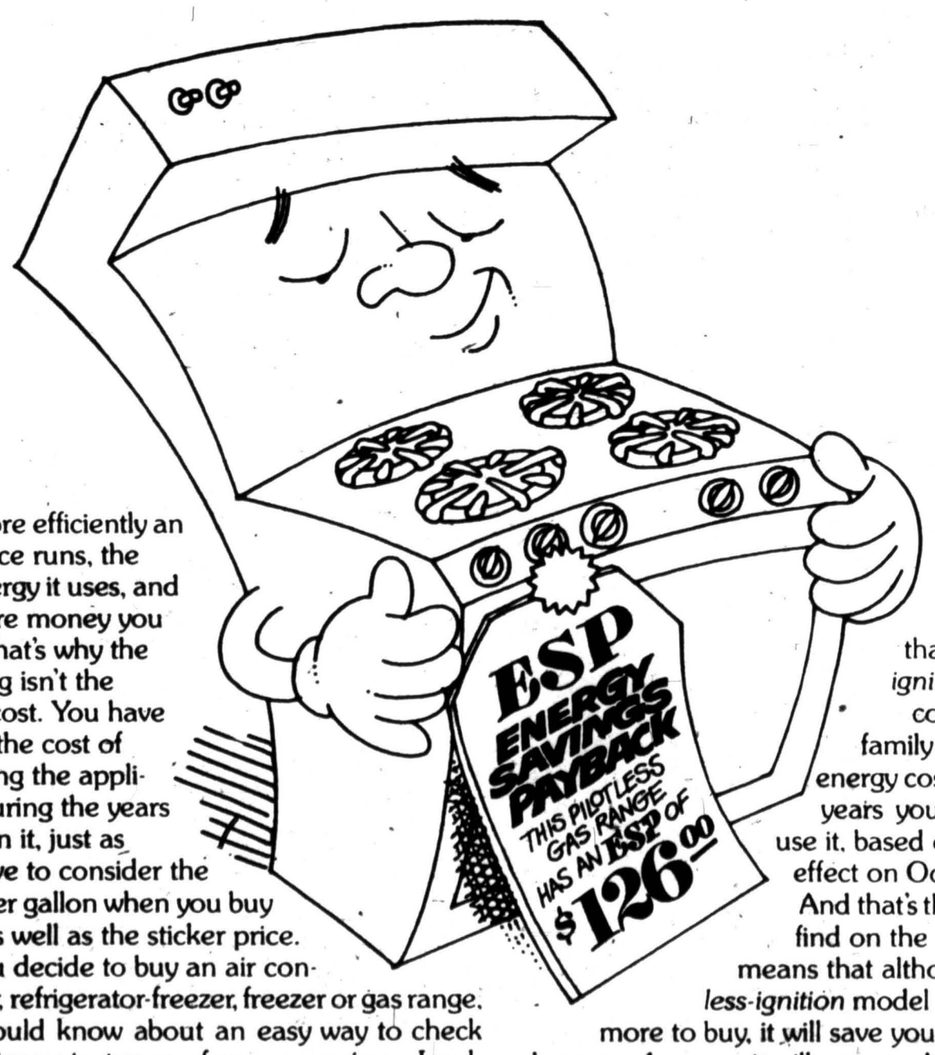
The price tag on an appliance doesn't tell you the total cost.
Using ESP does.



The more efficiently an appliance runs, the less energy it uses, and the more money you save. That's why the price tag isn't the whole cost. You have to add the cost of operating the appliance during the years you own it, just as you have to consider the miles per gallon when you buy a car, as well as the sticker price.

If you decide to buy an air conditioner, refrigerator-freezer, freezer or gas range, you should know about an easy way to check its efficiency in terms of money-savings. Look for the ESP tag (it stands for Energy Savings Payback), on the more efficient models at participating "We Care" dealers.

Here's how ESP works. A pilotless-ignition gas range, for example, uses about 40% less energy than a similar model with constantly burning gas pilot lights. Comparative testing shows that the pilotless-ignition gas range could save your family up to $126 in energy costs over the 13 years you probably will use it, based on gas rates in effect on October 1, 1977. And that's the figure you'll find on the ESP tag. That means that although the pilotless-ignition model may cost a bit more to buy, it will save you money in the long run, because it will cost you less to operate.

Comparing costs on the basis of efficiency is a good thought. And it's easy to do with ESP.

No one can afford to waste energy.

Remember When?

50 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 11, 1927:

IS CARMEL SO DIFFERENT?

We have just talked with the 16th person who thinks we should have a civic center in Carmel, with the public buildings around a park or plaza or something. And wouldn't it be a good idea to have an editorial in the paper about it?

We presume that every city and town that has started beautification in the past two decades has begun with a "civic center." If all the civic centers were placed end to end they'd cover the entire state of Iowa. If the best Carmel can offer of originality and "uniqueness" is a civic center, God help Carmel artistry!

SIP YOUR SOUP IN THE KEY OF C

Elsewhere in this issue of the Pine Cone, Mr. David Alberto, an expert on acoustics, has considerable to say upon the pitch and key of Carmel as it is, and as it should be. At first blush, his suggestions sound radical, but let them sink in and permeate, and the heavenly hush that might result if they could be made a part of the proposed city planning program, is intriguing.

For Carmel is surely getting noiseful. Where once surf and wind in trees had it all their way as noise producers, there are now alien and unwanted sounds. Many of them could be eliminated. Others might be modified or made beautiful. Anyhow the subject is worth consideration and discussion.

VILLAGE NEWS REEL

A new and unique method of salesmanship is being worked out in Carmel by Gay Newby. There is probably no one here who has failed to notice the children's playground equipment which is being set up at the end of Carpenter Street. Mrs. Newby is the local agent for this equipment, and near the swings and slides will be placed a desk and a telephone booth.

A sign reading "Phone here if you are interested," will be placed above the telephone. The idea will be for those interested to stop their cars, examine the toys and use the phone there for more information. Mrs. Newby will be at the other end of the line to supply the necessary details about the equipment.

25 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 14, 1952:

CITY IS CHOKING ITS OWN PINE TREES TO DEATH

The city is inadvertently shortening the life of its pine trees by as much as 15 years, according to information received by P. A. McCreery, planning commission chairman, this week.

McCreery has been uneasy for some time as to the possible damage to the trees from the practice of the street department in paving up to the bark of those pines that are in the range of the street improvement programs.

OPENING OF GOLDEN BOUGH THEATRE-IN-THE-ROUND

The fascinating Players Circle below the stage of Golden Bough Playhouse will have its gala opening on Dec. 10, the event being the presentation of Michael Head, famous in England and on the continent as composer, pianist and baritone, whose intimate recitals have earned highest critical acclaim. He is now on tour in Canada.

BUS FARE RAISE

Bay Rapid Transit has applied for permission to raise fares of No. 4 (which goes around the Point) from 10 cents to 15 cents, and to eliminate token sale from Carmel to Monterey.

10 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 16, 1967:

NEW BUDGET FORMAT SHOWN

Dr. Melvin Steckler, a special consultant to the city to study the streamlining of our municipal government operations, met with the city councilmen last night to propose what he considered a more easily understood budget format.

Dr. Steckler said his main point of the evening was to show the merits of considering cost and benefit collectively rather than separately.

The consultant likened the city's present budget to a "non-programed" format.

HALT . . . WHO GOES THERE?

A Carmel realtor recently bought a city lot on which stood a small frame house, but on which the realtor planned to build a commercial structure.

On a day he was out of his office, two men dropped by, one unknown to the realtor's woman assistant, the other recognized only as someone she had frequently seen. The second caller displayed a bill of sale at which she briefly glanced.

"Your boss," the man explained, "gave me the house he took down on that lot he bought. I came to tell him I'm ready to haul it off and rebuild it."

"Oh, if you don't have a lot to put it on," the woman offered, "I have a lovely one just right for that house!"

Not until he could stop laughing did he tell her, "I'm Stuyvie Fish. I'm rebuilding it on my Valley ranch for my foreman."

Her real estate enthusiasm still running strong, the woman turned to Mr. Fish's companion, "Could I interest you in one of our choice lots?"

More laughter, and then the answer: "I'm Mr. Odello — you know, the Odello Brothers."

"Oh," the lady managed, "artichokes," and she laughed, too.

McKenney named to teacher pension board

Kathie von Meier McKenney, daughter of Dorothy von Meier of Carmel, has been appointed to the nine-member State Teacher's Retirement System Board. The appointment was made on Nov. 2 by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Mrs. McKenney graduated from Carmel High School, in 1949, where she was a State of California Scholar. She also was president of her senior class and editor of the newspaper and yearbook. She was a student editor of the Pine Cone, a staff writer for the Spectator and a newscaster for KDON radio station in Salinas.

In 1950, she married A. Carol McKenney III, son of the late Dr. A. Carol McKenney, of Pebble Beach. The couple lives in Castro Valley. They have four children, ranging in age from 13 to 26.

Mrs. McKenney attended Monterey Peninsula College and UC Berkeley, majoring in journalism. She has been a member of the Alameda County Planning Commission Task Force, the BART Advisory Board and the League of Women Voters, as well as director of the Community Association and president of the PTA.

Other members of the board include Superintendent Wilson Riles, State Controller Ken Cory, State Finance Director Roy Bell, a banking and insurance industry representative and members of the teaching profession.

About the Town

IT WAS WALL-TO-WALL PEOPLE at the Cherry Foundation Group art exhibit reception Sunday afternoon. Clint and Maggie Eastwood, friends of the artists, were among those at the reception. Six Carmel artists — Bede Urich, Bill Sprague, Richard Whitehead, Clell Harrison, Alice Elcano and John Wagner — showed their works in the main gallery for a crowd of 100. All of the artists are graduates of the Carmel Art Institute, and for most, this was their first public exhibit.

It also was the first time paintings other than those done by the late Mrs. Cherry have been shown in the main gallery. Judging by the show's popularity, more shows of this kind will follow. The paintings will hang on exhibit through November.

GORDON AND ELIZABETH Stimson, longtime residents of San Antonio Street, have recently returned from a three-week tour of Africa with an amazing story.

They disembarked in Nairobi, Kenya, and proceeded to the Tsavo Game Preserve, said to be the largest wildlife refuge in the world. They stayed at the unique Calgumi Lodge, a lodge built next to the local animal watering hole. At night, lights are lit and guests can watch the parade of creatures — buffalo, zebras, hyenas, elephants, rhinos, gazelles and lions — stop by for their nocturnal drinks.

Late in the evening, the Stimsons saw a large lion "eight or nine feet long" followed by his lioness, several smaller males and four roly-poly cubs approach the water hole. Opposite the pond appeared a group of elephants, one large bull, followed by several small babies, one of them extremely pudgy.

The lion king advanced toward the baby elephant, and the elephants formed a circle, with the largest bull facing the lion. The lion attacked and the bull sucked the red Kenyan mud and gravel up his trunk and sprayed the lion full in the face. The lion retreated for a moment, but attacked three more times and each time got the same treatment. At last, the bedraggled king of beasts turned with his cubs and wives to look for dinner elsewhere.

Notables in attendance were Walter from La Boheme, Andre from L'Escargot, George Brook-Kothlow and his wife, Jennifer, a beautiful Indian actress who confided she has signed a contract for a Star Wars television series, and a local jewel, John Duvall, attired in a black velvet suit.

The two-foot-high wedding cake, shaped like a Christmas tree, was coque de le Buche, that is, cream puffs shot with custard and coated with caramelized sugar and piled high pyramid fashion.

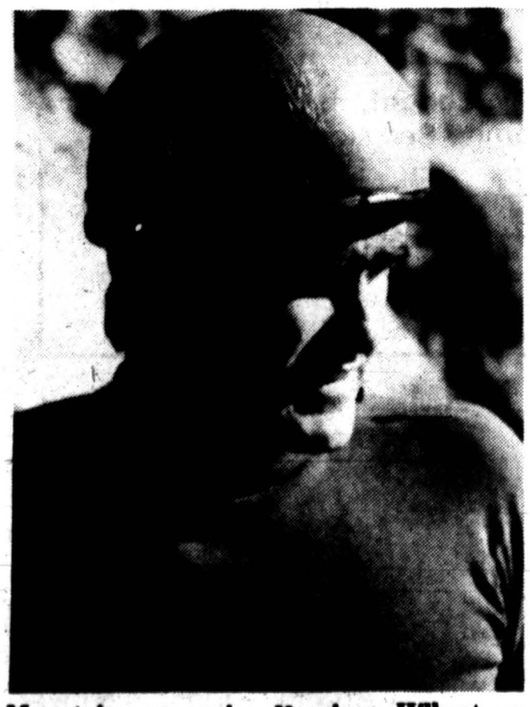
Son of Carmel couple praised for outdoor skills

Harrison S. Hilbert, raised in Carmel and now the director of an outdoor studies program at Idaho State University, has been nominated to the American Alpine Club, a prestigious mountaineering club.



Mountaineers praise Harrison Hilbert, a 1960 graduate of Carmel High School.

Hilbert was called "the finest mountaineer and expedition leader" to have passed the National Outdoor Leadership School, conducted for outdoor education instructors. The praise came from Robert J. Reynolds, leader of the course which was conducted earlier this fall in Lander, Wyo.

"Hilbert's competence and knowledge as a mountaineer surpassed that of the students as well as the instructors," said Reynolds.

Hilbert, known at the Pocatello campus as "H," is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Hilbert. The couple lives at Vista and Junipero.

His nomination to the Alpine Club required three recommendations. The three who offered recommendations were Bob Irvine, a climbing ranger at Teton National Park; Jock Glidden, a teacher at Weber State College and mountaineer from Ogden, Utah; and Galen Rowell, a mountaineer who has written for National Geographic.

Retired exec honored by Stanford

He is a former executive vice-president of the Del Monte Corp. and was a founder and president of the Business School Alumni Association.

His community activities have included being chairman of a 1960 Winter Olympic Committee and chairman of the Freedom Foundation, the Financial Executives Institute and Children's Health Council. He now is retired.

Federal team praises Carmel forestry efforts

A new federal urban forestry program will model itself after Carmel's forest management system.

The two-month-old Urban Forest Program recently sent state and federal foresters to see how Carmel cares for its timber.

The foresters went away so impressed, they vowed to use Carmel as an example for the nationwide program.

"Carmel has an excellent forestry program," said Federal Forester Robert Gustafson, representing the California Forest Service and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Along with state and federal foresters, Gustafson was here in August, researching the new federal program that began Oct. 1.

The program has received $3.5 million in federal money along with matching state grants, such as the $100,000 pledged by California.

The Urban Forest Program will provide "technical assistance" to cities beginning some sort of forestry plan, Gustafson said.

Carmel probably would receive no aid under the program because of the city's advanced forestry department and commission, noted Gustafson.

The foresters are still drawing up guidelines for the federal program. They are looking closely at Carmel's forestry handbook before setting up their own procedural guidelines, said Gustafson.

Following the foresters' visit, Gustafson forwarded a letter to the Forestry Department, noting, "Carmel is ahead of the rest of the state in urban forestry."

Another federal forester, Bob Noble, said the group has toured the country for weeks, and found more forestry work here on the Peninsula than in "most places," he said.

The Urban Forestry Program is not new, but it is new as a national program, Noble said.

In 1972, Congress approved funding for the cooperative state and federal program.

Carmel City Forester Gregg D'Ambrosio said Carmel is rare among cities, because it has a full-time forester and an active forestry commission.

"Most other cities just have a parks department, but most of our energy here goes to the forest, not the parks," D'Ambrosio said.

Carmel has a "passive" use of parks, the city forester said. "We don't go for ballfields or playgrounds in our parks."

The city Forestry Department oversees some 35,000 trees, according to D'Ambrosio. This includes consultation to Carmelites who privately own trees.

The Forestry Commission was established in 1958. Forestry commissioners are appointed for two-year terms, and the commission elects its own chairman.

Hugh Smith was the first advisory city forester, serving from 1963 to 1967. In 1968, Bob Tate became the first permanent city forester, and in 1971 D'Ambrosio succeeded him.

The five-member Forestry Commission is appointed by the mayor. Its members are Raymond Taylor, Matt Smith, Hugh Smith, Sinclair Kerby-Miller and Bruce Crane.

Two commission seats will open next month when the terms of Kerby-Miller and Crane expire. The commission has forwarded a letter to the City Council recommending reappointment of both men.

Horsemanship judging Saturday

The Carmel Valley Chapter of the California Dressage Society will present its third annual Fall Dressage Show, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 12-13, at Stonegate Stables, 25 Los Robles Rd., Carmel Valley. Show hours are 7 a.m.-5 p.m. both days.

Alexsandra Howard of El Granada will judge entries from all parts of northern and central California. Riders will compete in all levels of dressage through Prix St. George.

Dressage is based on the classical tenets of horsemanship. It seeks to produce a calm, obedient horse who moves forward freely and is perfectly attuned to the commands of its rider. At its highest levels, it produces the breathtaking spectacle of the dancing movements of piaffe and passage and the demanding "airs above the ground" as practiced by the Spanish Riding School of Vienna.

Several riders who have qualified in the Olympic Trials are expected to compete, including Janet Garwood, Pebble Beach, on Hill Sail; Ellen McWilliams, Carmel Valley, on Raven; and Gwen Stockerbrand, Santa Rosa, on Bao.

Spectators are welcome. There is no charge for admission. Lunch, snacks and beverages will be available. Ample parking will be provided.

Stonegate Stables is just off the Los Laureles Grade Rd., approximately 10 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Rd.

Brunn, Ware find support

Rival lobbies both eye election roles

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

OLD CARMEL, the year-old lobby for residents, and the half-century-old Carmel Business Association may be perceived as political rivals, but they both seemed to agree on one point last week.

The point: Get organized for the March City Council elections.

The two groups gathered in separate meetings, but discussed the same topic last Thursday. The CBA met in the plush Sunset Room at La Playa Hotel while Old Carmel chose tiny Grant Hall at All Saints' Episcopal Church. Both groups gave hard thought to tactics and standard bearers for the council race.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg told an audience of 20 at the Old Carmel gathering that they had better start considering whom to support in the elections.

The filing deadline for candidates is Dec. 29.

If incumbents Mike Brown and Helen Arnold decline to run, voters may nominate other candidates until Jan. 3, according to election laws in the California State Code.

Old Carmel Chairman Art Strasburger, owner of Carmel Realty, suggested the group keep a "low profile" on the election.

EARLIER THURSDAY, at the CBA breakfast meeting, City Council candidate Richard Ware sought support from the gathering of 25 businessmen.

The group appeared to offer support, giving Ware a round of applause, a few cheers and a collective sigh of relief that Ware might represent interests of the business community.

Ware, owner of the Carmel Cafe, announced his candidacy in September.

Last month, Ware ignored a planning commission denial of his application for an awning at his cafe. In a letter to the commission, he said it exceeded "proper authority" and he installed the awning anyway.

Ware claimed since a previous Planning Commission approved the original awning, he has a right to recover the frame as approved.

The yellow-and-white awning has been in front of the Carmel Cafe since Oct. 20. The cafe is located at Mission Street and Fifth Avenue.

NORBERG TOLD the Old Carmel gathering that the organization must not spread itself too thin by endorsing too many candidates.

The group immediately offered support to Howard Brunn, an unannounced candidate, Old Carmel member and owner of the Carmel Bay Company.

Brunn has said he "probably" will run for City Council. He did not attend the Old Carmel meeting on Thursday, however.

Old Carmel members also voiced support for incumbents Mike Brown and Helen Arnold. Neither lawmaker has announced for the race.

The group considered support for Ware, member of both Old Carmel and the Carmel Business Association, but it declined because of his "inactive" membership.

Planning Commissioners Dr. Donald Davidson and Sandy Swain attended the Old Carmel meeting.

"Our goal is so simple," explained member Ben Lyon. "We just want three people on the City Council who believe Carmel is primarily a residential community."

OLD CARMEL and the CBA touched similar organizational bases Thursday. Each announced plans to solidify as a group, and to document group goals.

Carmel attorney Philip A. Oberg, an Old Carmel member, will draw up "loosely constructed" bylaws to be discussed at today's 5 p.m. meeting.

While dining on scrambled eggs and fresh fruit, the CBA came to a similar consensus Thursday morning.

"We need an overall program for Carmel merchants," said CBA President Bob Bailey. Bailey owns the Mole Hole gift shop on San Carlos near Sixth Avenue.

Bailey took over in August when the former president, Dale Leidig, quit and branded the group a "social club."

THE CBA also announced the formation of a volunteer group, "Carmel and the Four Seasons," which will gear key business and advertising campaigns around buying seasons.

Chairman Polly Goss said the group's initial efforts will be directed toward the upcoming Table Fashions Contest, Nov. 13 to Nov. 19 at the Cypress Inn, and the Christmas Program, Dec. 9 tree lighting at the Carmel Plaza.

The CBA announced a tentative Christmas theme of bringing Carmelites "back to Carmel" for Christmas shopping.

A CBA news release said the organization's program for 1978 will be available in January. The CBA will vie for control, again, of the Pumpkin-Carving contest, the release said.

Old Carmel sponsored the contest last month when the CBA declined sponsorship.

The CBA also announced a raise in annual membership fees from $50 to $60.

Pearsons return from Greece

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Pearson recently returned from a one-month trip to Greece. They visited their daughter and son-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. Sander Heller, in Gylfada, just outside Athens.

The Pearsons took an island cruise and several motor trips, admiring the classic beauty of the Greek people as well as the land.

A highlight of the visit was seeing their new granddaughter, Emily Jeanne, born in June. Their grandson Joshua, born on the Monterey Peninsula, is now 20 months old. He doesn't speak Greek yet — but then, he doesn't speak much English, either.

Capt. Heller is a finance officer for U.S. forces in Greece, disbursing funds for the embassy and members of the Army and Navy. Recently, he also aided a stream of Americans who were forced to leave Ethiopia with nothing but the clothes they were wearing.

Presbyterian Church names new minister

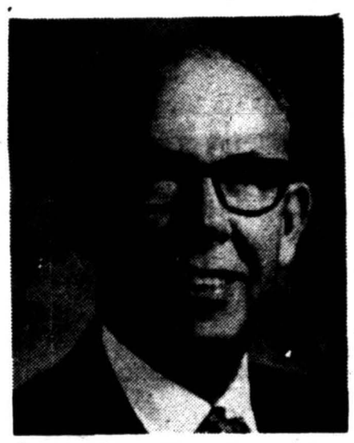
A minister from Fresno has been installed by Carmel Presbyterian Church as its "outreach" minister. In ceremonies Sunday, the Rev. Wayne Walker was welcomed at a reception following his installation.

The Rev. Mr. Walker previously was a minister at Calvary Presbyterian Church in Fresno. His duties in Carmel will include calling on persons at home, in hospitals and in rest homes. He also will serve in the Presbyterian Fishnet program.

The program runs an employment service, provides social services to the poor, aid for the displaced and visitors for senior citizens.

The new minister has a master's degree in theology from Princeton Seminary. He has served at churches in Berkeley, Glendale and Yakima, Wash.

In the church office, parishioners hung an announcement to greet the new minister. It read: "The people are the ministers. Assistant ministers: Dean Hendricks, Wayne Walker."



Carmel Presbyterian Church welcomes its new minister, the Rev. Wayne Walker.

Ocean-View Lot

$15,750

North of San Francisco and west of Garberville, in Humboldt County, lies a master-planned sea and forest community, where there will never be overcrowding and seaside properties are still unbelievably low in price. The whole area is a sportsman's paradise. Salmon fishing, surfing, oceanfront golf course; hunting, camping and hiking in a 'next-door' national forest. Best of all, there's water! Has airstrip. Assumable loan and owner will assist. It would take only a small amount of cash to purchase this exceptional land value. Call us for further details.

On Mal Paso Drive in CARMEL RIVIERA

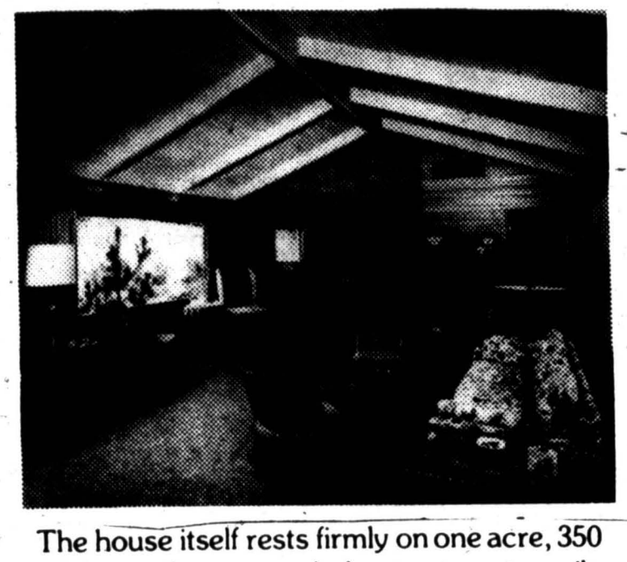
Looking in, you wouldn't know it's there. Looking out, you command a 180° vista of the sea: the coast's major shipping lane, the whales' promenade, the sport-fishermens' playground.



The house itself rests firmly on one acre, 350 feet above the sea and about a quarter-mile inland. Shaped like the wings of a 747, it points resolutely toward the southwest. The north wing, on your right as you come down the drive, is 53 feet long. It contains the 26 x 19 living room, panelled in bleached mahogany, crowned by a vaulted ceiling, united with the sea by 2 vast picture windows. A brick chimney breast rises to the ridge beam. And beyond is the north bedroom, a soft, insistent lavendar with its own aluminum-cased windows and luxurious bath.

The east wing is 55 feet long. Its 2 bedrooms branch off a long cabinet-lined corridor. The master bedroom is at the wing-tip, creating the extraordinary conformation of 2 sleeping areas almost 100 feet apart. The inboard bedroom is now a formal dining room, but could as easily be a den, library, or . . . ah, bedroom.

At the center, where the wings join, is the Captain's Bridge, a fantastic kitchen facing the sea through an oblique corner window. Tiled counter tops with built-in sink, Corning range and other appliances line the seaward walls. And behind is a butler's pantry with wet bar, breakfast alcove and, through French doors, a warm, glassed-in deck.

Outbuildings include a fully equipped, climate-controlled greenhouse; a potting shed we mistook for a guest house; a large lath-house for orchids; fenced-in garden; and the world's largest Monterey pine.

Among things you take for granted: carpeting, drapes, 2-car garage, an extra room and bath on the lower level, shake roof, vertical redwood siding. But this you don't: all the water you want because you're part of the Carmel Riviera Mutual Water Co.

Built in 1958, this 19-year-old is old enough to have all the kinks out, young enough to be in full bloom. The price: $189,500

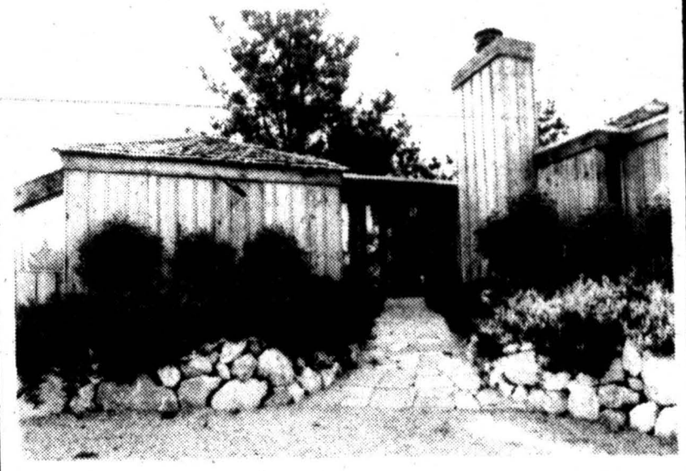
Garrapata Ridge
in the Big Sur Country

Twelve miles south of Carmel, a road winds from the Coast Highway to Garrapata Ridge, where views extend for miles including, on the east, the Santa Lucia Mountains above, and, to the west, the coast from Point Sur to Santa Cruz. Here, where the beauty of dawn, moonrise or sunset enriches life, is a recently completed home set amid pines on 11 acres of lovely land.



Build of redwood with heavy shake roof and areas of glass capturing panoramic views, this fully insulated home has established landscaping featuring granite flagstone paths and patios, sunken hot tub and sprinkler system. Even the laundry and workshop are skillfully designed to encompass outdoor enjoyment.

In harmony with exterior use of redwood and rock, a granite fireplace wall enhances the paneled living room with heavy beamed ceiling, plank floor, and dramatic, touchplate lighting. A breakfast bar, at right, opens to the kitchen with redwood cabinets, butcher block counters and a pantry. The master bedroom is to the left. Granite floors the bathroom and sunken shower with sliding glass door to a patio.

From the built-in bed in the windowed alcove of the study you can enjoy both coast and mountain scenery. Below, with separate entrance, is a guest room. However, should you desire a guest house, an already approved construction permit makes this possible. Telephone, electricity and unlimited water add to the enjoyment of this unique property on Garrapata Ridge in spectacular Big Sur Country.

Price $225,000.
